PREMIER MEETS ON MACBLO BID

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Premier Bill Bennett was meeting today with the heads of MacMillan-Bloedel, Canadian Pacific Investments and Domtar Ltd., to determine how he can prevent a takeover of MacBlo.

The premier, who vowed to take "whatever action is necessary" to prevent a takeover of the company, scheduled separate meetings today with M-B president Calvert Knudsen, Domtar president Alex D. Hamilton and CPI chairman Ian D. Sinclair.

Bennett will detail the results of meetings at a news conference Friday, a spokesman in the premier's office said.

MacMillan-Bloedel, the nation's largest forest products company, and Domtar called off their bidding war for control of each other's shares last month. The Montreal-based CPI's offer for control of M-B was still open, however.

The bidding for control of MacMillan-Bloedel has been opposed not only by Bennett's government, but by the western province's powerful International Woodworkers of America.

'ECONOMY IN JEOPARDY'

Bank Hike Angers Tories

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs reacted with outrage today in the wake of a Bank of Canada decision to raise its lending rate to a record 11.25 per cent, claiming the government is jeopardizing the country's prospects for economic recovery.

"It is staggering that the government would decide to raise interest rates at this time," said Progressive Conservative MP James Gillies (Don Valley).

Meanwhile, chartered banks across the country reacted to the news by increasing their own interest rates.

"I am totally appalled," said Gillies. "It will cost more to buy a home, more to borrow money, more for everything."

New Democratic Party spokesman Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton Melville) called on Finance Minister Jean Chretien to order to central bank to rescind Wednesday's half-a-percentage-point increase in its trend-setting lending rate.

Nystrom said the Bank of Canada failed to halt the slide of the dollar last year with six increases in interest rates and there is no reason a seventh will work. Since last January, the bank rate has increased from 7.5 per cent.

The latest increase would increase the cost of living and stifle job creation by making it costly for business to expand. He said the government should allow the dollar to find its own value on world markets.

While government critics expressed shock and dismay, chartered banks across the country fall into line with the central bank, raising their prime lending rate to 12 per cent.

The prime rate, the rate banks charge their most creditworthy customers such as large multinationals, is normally set half a percentage point above the bank rate.

Other lending rates—for consumers, businessmen farmers and mortgage interest payments—are set proportionately higher, depending on the bank's assessment of the borrower's ability to repay the loan.

Spokesmen for the Toronto Dominion Bank and the Bank of Nova Scotia said their only firm decision so far was to increase the prime to 12 per cent and increase the interest rate on non-chequeing accounts to 9.5 per cent from their cur-

Firms Plan Major Outlays

OTTAWA (CP) — Business leaders do not expect the economy to improve in the year ahead, but they are planning increased investment spending, the Conference Board in Canada said today.

In its quarterly survey of business attitudes of 220 senior executives, the board, a private economic research organization, says somewhat higher levels of investment can be expected in the near term.

The survey does not take into account Wednesday's half-a-percentage-point increase in the Bank of Canada's lending rate.

The central bank's decision this week to raise its lending rate to the chartered banks to a record-high 11.25 per cent is likely to increase borrowing costs for business. It could dampen enthusiasm for new spending on plants, machinery and equipment.

"The outlook for business investment has improved substantially compared to six months ago," said the board in a news release.

"The depreciation of the Canadian dollar and strong foreign sales have improved capacity utilization (the proportion of available equipment and manpower in active service) and profit levels to the point that senior business executives now are planning higher levels of investment spending in the near term."

The board said its latest survey showed the highest level of confidence since it began sending out questionnaires two years ago. The present was a good time to invest.

After two years of weak investment spending, the board found a turning point was reached in mid-1978. It is forecasting a new willingness among business to expand in the months ahead.

The businessmen foresee little change, or possibly a worsening in the economy as a whole during the next six months. Compared with the board's previous survey, three months ago, the proportion expecting the economy to worsen in the short-

GENE ISOLATED THAT CAUSES DEPRESSION?

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A California geneticist claims to have identified the gene in humans that could be a cause of mental depression, chronic alcoholism and even multiple sclerosis.

Writing in the upcoming issue of the prestigious British journal Nature, Dr. David Comings of the City of Hope Medical Centre in Duarte, Calif., said he has isolated and identified in people who died of suicide and alcoholism an abnormal gene that was more than twice as prevalent in their brain cells as it was in the brains of people who died of stroke, heart disease, cancer or accidents.

"Schizophrenia and depression are psychoses that each afflict 1 per cent of the population," Comings said Wednesday night in a telephone interview from his home in Duarte, about 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

"We claim to have found what appears to be the first biochemical evidence of one of those psychoses.

While the finding of that evidence is a basic medical observation, it is nowhere near a cure for depression or any of the other two diseases linked with the gene. But, at the very least, it is a first major step toward improving the understanding and treatment of depression the leading cause of suicide.

Comings calls the newly discovered gene Pc 1 Duarte, saying it is a mutant gene genetically different fom any other gene found in the brain.

He said he found the gene in the grey and white matter of the brain, in men and in women and in whites and blacks.

The California researcher identified the gene as a cystosol protein, which he found only in the brain. He said this makes it impossible to test for in infants before they are born.

Some other genetic defects can be found before birth by tapping the amniotic fluid in a mother's womb.

"We have only identified this gene in the brains of dead people," Comings said. "We don't know yet if we can devise a test to identify the gene in people still living. One would have to devise such a test to treat peo-

After weeks of virtual seclusion in his palace, the embattled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi left Tehran with his family today for two days of rest at a resort 64 kilometres east of here.

There was growing speculation when — or if — the shah would leave the country. The monarch has said he would like to take a vacation "when the situation permits."

Some observers have speculated the holiday could turn into an extended one that could spell the end of the shah's 38-year reign.

Government sources said the shah would rest "for a few days" at a resort near Tehran but there were no plans for him to leave the country.

Ardeshir Zahedi, a key government aide, reported the shah had issued a royal decree appointing Shahpour Bakhtiar prime minister. The shah asked Bakhtiar last weekend to form a new civilian government to try to quell Iran's political violence.

Reuters news agency today quoted military sources as saying the commander of the Iranian army has resigned and left the country with the approval of the shah.

The sources said Gen. Gholamli Oveissi, who was also the martial law governor of Tehran, was granted permission to resign earlier this week by the shah, who is commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Oveissi was widely regarded as a political hardliner opposed to the formation of a new government by Bakhtiar.

Zahedi, Iran's ambassador to Washington, said the royal family is expected to return to Tehran on Saturday, when Bakhtiar will probably present his cabinet to the monarch and the government will be formally installed, replacing a two-month-old military administration.

Meanwhile, 182 more Canadians and other nationals were brought from Iran by Canadian Hercules planes to Ankara today and officials estimated the evacuation may be completed Friday.

Initially, Canadian officials expected to complete the rescue program today but encountered some slowdown and finally concluded the remaining 70 awaiting transport at Tehran cannot be brought out until Friday.

In two days the Canadian planes carried 374 Canadians and other nationals out of Tehran.

GUADELOUPE GATHERING BY BIG FOUR

SAINT-FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) — President Carter and the government chiefs of Britain, France and West Germany begin an informal two-day summit meeting haunted by the spectre of anarchy in Iran.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, told reporters in Washington Wednesday that the president in his talks today with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain would reiterate his support for Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Brzezinski said the three European leaders agree with Carter's backing for the threatened shah, one of the biggest customers for their arms and other manufactures and a major source of oil for Western industry.

Postal Trio Fired

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office was accused today of trying to break up the militant inside workers' union by firing three union stewards here.

The three stewards of the Ottawa local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers were fired Wednesday and told to leave the Alta Vista post office. Two of them refused to leave and stayed to finish their shifts.

The three who were fired—Pat Berry, Danielle Desormeaux and Guy Barrette—are filing grievances, said Louis Lang, president of the Ottawa local.

They were fired in connection with the union's mass defiance last October of a parliamentary back-to-work order. There has been a handful of firings and hundreds of job suspensions across the country following the strike.

Oil Tanks Blazing

DUISBURG (AP) — Flames engulfed at least four large oil storage tanks at this Rhine River port today, causing millions of dollars in damage, police said.

Cause of the blaze in "four to six tanks" was not immediately known, police said.

Wall-Walker Robot Cools Bomb Fears

TORONTO (CP) — Can a $12,000 robot named RM1-1 or RM1-2 take some of the human risk out of responding to a bomb threat?

The RCMP and the Ontario Provincial Police apparently think so. The RCMP has bought seven of the robots and the OPP is buying two.

The robot—designed to open doors, climb vertical walls, travel any terrain and pull a three-quarter-ton truck—is the brainchild of Borg Pedersen and George Scott and is being marketed by Pedsco (Canada) Ltd. of Toronto.

The six-wheeled robot can be controlled by a cable of up to about 90 metres or directed by remote-control radio as far away as a mile.

It is equipped with a closed-circuit television camera that can be moved close to the suspected bomb. Its long mechanical arm has a claw-like hand that can softly pick up a package.

"If the package is a bomb, the robot can be equipped with devices to disrupt the bomb," a provincial police bomb disposal expert said.

"It does take some of the personal risk away."

However, a man still has to go in and pick up the pieces and there is always a danger of finding a bomb within a bomb, said the OPP officer, who asked not to be identified because bomb disposal experts are often the target of terrorists.

Between January and September of last year, Canadian police bomb-disposal officers investigated bombings, attempted bombings or recovered explosives at least once a day.

There were 115 incidents in British Columbia, 59 in Alberta, 17 in Saskatchewan, 20 in Manitoba, 136 in Ontario, 26 in Quebec, 18 in New Brunswick, 17 in Nova Scotia, three in Newfoundland, six in the Yukon and four in the North West Territories. There were none in Prince Edward Island.

The robot, called a remote mobile investigation unit, also can be armed with a shotgun that can be fired remotely to "tear away the covering and see what's inside," the expert said.

But the Pederson-Scott team has developed a small portable x-ray unit, costing $4,500, that can take pictures through a half an inch of steel when mounted on the robot.

"Once the robot is in position we can move in, take the x-rays and within a minute see a print of what we're facing," the expert said.

He also said the robot can be used for more than sniffing out bombs.

"It could drag out a person who has been shot and is still under fire. Or it could scan an area where a suspect is holed up. Instead of sending in policemen, we could simply deploy the robot."

Sidney Man Second Big B.C. Winner

A Sidney man has won a million dollars on the Provincial Lottery.

Lottery officials are withholding his name pending verification of the ticket.

The man, who held the lucky ticket on the New Year's Eve draw, is at present visiting Europe but is expected home later in the week.

Don Phillips, a spokesman for the B.C. Lotteries Commission, said the man is the second big winner in B.C. in the draw.

Meanwhile Lady Luck visited another Victoria household Wednesday night with the O'Flynn family walking off with $100,000 win on the Western Canada lottery.

The winning ticket — 49769 in Series 04 — was one of five in a booklet bought jointly by Peggie and Harry O'Flynn of 881 McAdam Place and O'Flynn's father, Peter O'Flynn, 83, of 915 Selkirk.

"I didn't believe at first . . . and I still don't," Mrs. O'Flynn said in an interview this morning.

It's not, however, the first time the family has won on the Western. Last week they picked up $25 for getting the last three numbers right. They've been lucky like that on three or four previous draws.

And Mrs. O'Flynn said she once won $450 on a local radio contest about 15 years ago.

The two families will split the $100,000 windfall between them.

Mrs. O'Flynn said she wasn't sure what she and her husband, a retired marine engineer, will do with the money.

Their needs are few, she said. They already own a new house and new car.

"We have no plans. The only place I'd like to go is Tahiti."

The elder O'Flynn is also uncertain what he and his wife will do with their winnings.

"He told us he only wished this had happened to him 30 years ago," Mrs. O'Flynn said.

Fed-Up Wives Walking Out

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — More Canadian wives are walking out of their marriages than men and the experts are alarmed.

Marriage counsellors say it is a new phenomenon that has left men dumbfounded and suddenly insecure.

Janice Troupe of the Catholic Family Services Bureau in Windsor said in an interview that more women are leaving men because they are becoming bored.

"They're bored and tired and deciding not to let men run all over them any more," she said. "And men not surprisingly aren't coping very well with this situation."

Ms. Troupe said women are "going to social workers and saying, 'Hey look, I just want to be me. I've put up with a lot for years and now the kids are gone it's time to do my thing.' "

Frank MacDonald, executive director of the bureau, agrees with Ms. Troupe and says there is a fairly predictable pattern developing.

"And what a shame men see that pattern only when it's too late," he said. "A woman complains, her husband calls her a nag and nobody listens."

MacDonald said that "she means what she says but it doesn't have any effect, until suddenly she walks out and he falls apart."

MacDonald said the husband takes two or three days off work, is put on medication, feels sorry for himself and then starts to hustle.

He said the husband wants to fix things up "make them the way they were, even if it includes that nagging he didn't want to listen to before."

But quite often the wife isn't willing to settle for "before," MacDonald said.

He said that when a woman musters up the courage to pack up and leave, it means things are over from her point of view.

Rev. Edward Insley of St. Peter's Anglican Church in Windsor said one of the problems many married couples have is they don't know how to communicate.

He said that heart-to-heart conversations virtually have disappeared in "this fast-paced, highly competitive world."

If couples expressed their true feelings more, instead of expecting extra-sensory perception from their spouses, marriages might stand a better chance, he said.

INSTANT MILLIONAIRES: It was a great beginning to 1979 for Mrs. and Mrs. Charles Balser of Vancouver. After working New Year's Eve tending bar at a Canadian Legion party, Balser, 55, arrived home to learn from his wife he had won $1 million in the Dec. 31 Provincial Lottery draw. Balser's only plan at the moment is to leave his job as a bartender.

Airline Disruption Threat from Strike

MONCTON (CP) — The 100 Transport Canada employees who certify civilian aircraft as airworthy before they fly will walk off their jobs Friday to back contract demands, Ed Jensen, chairman of the Aircraft Operations Group, said Thursday.

A prolonged strike could disrupt commercial air travel.

The inspectors have been without a contract since July, 1975.

Besides aircraft inspection, the group also represents 20 executive pilots who fly federal government Jetstars, and 45 pilots who fly Canadian Coast Guard helicopters and ice patrols. These also are to walk off the job.

The aviation group is seeking a wage increase of about $6,000. They currently earn an average of $22,000 annually.

Jensen said in an interview the dispute extends back to establishment of the Anti-Inflation Board.

"An arbitrator recommended raises beyond the guidelines of the anti-inflation act. But he felt we qualified for special consideration."

The board turned down the pay increases.

The aviation group is responsible for inspecting all navigational aid facilities, airports and aircraft in Canada.

Air Canada has Authority to check out its own aircraft but these must be certified by the aviation group before flying.

The group is also responsible for certifying all personnel who hold civil aviation licenses, including pilots, flight crews and ground personnel.

Fishing Pair Still Missing

An aircraft search failed Wednesday to locate two Tahsis residents who went missing Dec. 29 while fishing in a small boat off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

A rescue spokesman said the search effort resumed early today.

He said two aircraft from Canadian Forces Base Comox and a helicopter unsuccessfully searched a large strip of coastal waters for Jim Steer, 30, and Janet Cooke, 29, who left their west-coast village in an eight-metre boat. They were to return the same day.

200 Use Dayliner Each Day

The Esquimalt and Nanaimo Dayliner service has been carrying an average of 200 passengers a day since Christmas, John Cooper, chairman of the citizens' committee that helped save the service, said Wednesday.

He said it is difficult to pinpoint any specific reason for the heavy use in the last 10 days.

"The interesting thing about them — and about the month of December — is that it has mostly been a case of individual travellers," he said. "There haven't been any groups travelling."

The passenger count for December was 3,800, just 39 short of November, but up from 1,600 in December, 1977.

The passenger load for 1978 was about 39,900, compared with 11,300 for the previous year.

The Victoria-to-Courtenay service was given a new lease on life in November when the Canadian Transport Commission's review committee reversed a 1976 CTC decision that would have allowed CP Rail to abandon the service Dec. 13.

Oil Slick Threatens Fishing

LA CORUNA, Spain (Reuter) — An oil slick 64 kilometres long and at least five kilometres wide is threatening fishing grounds and beaches around this port city, fishermen said Wednesday night.

The fishermen, from the small port of Sada 16 kilometres north of La Coruna, told interviewers strong westerly gales were pushing the slick from the holed Greek supertanker Andros Patria toward the northwestern coast.

The fishermen said five boats will sail from the port today with detergent to try to sink the oil. Other boats and Spanish navy ships spread detergent over the slick Wednesday.

But, the fishermen said, the slick was certain to harm their livelihood because the detergent mixes with the oil to form balls and sink to the ocean floor. The balls are eaten by fish, which are then unsuitable for human consumption.

The Andros Patria was being towed toward Lisbon on Wednesoday, leaving behind in the sea an estimated 5,000 to 10,000 tons of oil.

Viet March on Cambodia Draws Criticism from U.S.

Times News Services

The United States Wednesday criticized the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia and expressed the hope that great powers would not become directly involved in the rapidly escalating war in Indochina.

This first official U.S. criticism of the Vietnamese war effort, tempered by a reminder of America's strong condemnation of the human rights record of Cambodia, came as Vietnam-backed Cambodian insurgents claimed to have captured two more provincial capitals in northeastern Cambodia.

The rising threat against the Cambodian government prompted a second telegram by Cambodian Foreign Minister Ieng Sary to the United Nations late Wednesday requesting an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council. The minister said a Cambodian delegation would arrive in New York to attend the session and "enlighten" it on what he called "the savage aggression of Vietnam."

Meanwhile, reports today said Vietnamese troops and warplanes have penetrated 160 kilometres into Cambodia with an eight-pronged attack and have captured a quarter of the country.

Radio Phnom Penh claimed Vietnamese warplanes bombed a hospital in the Mekong River town of Neak Luong, killing "several patients."

American B-52s accidentally bombed Neak Luong, 35 miles southeast of Phnom Penh, in January, 1973, killing about 100 persons and levelling the hospital in the city.

In Washington, the State Department said Wednesday the United States would support a Cambodian request for U.N. debate on the Vietnamese invasion.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said information indicated Vietnamese forces have taken the Cambodian town of Kra Tie, and were threatening the provincial capital Kompong Chan.

The Vietnamese forces have secured the entire northeast section of the country and launched heavy attacks along highways and rivers south of Phnom Penh, latest reports said.

Radio Phnom Penh, in broadcasts monitored in Bangkok today, said Vietnamese warplanes were preceding the ground force, softening up resistance in Cambodian towns and cities.

The official Cambodian radio said eight separate battle fronts had been set up by the invasion force, ranging along the entire frontier.

Phnom Penh claimed 14,100 Vietnamese were killed on the fronts between Christmas and New Year's Day. This was considered an exaggeration by most observers.

In his statement Wednesday, Carter of the U.S. State department said that, "while the United States takes great exception to the human rights record of the government of Kampuchea (the official name of Cambodia) we, as a matter of principle, do not feel that unilateral intervention against the regime by any third power is justified."

Tanks, Troops Battle Killer Blizzards In Europe

Times News Services

Tanks and troops began crunching their way through mountains of snow in central Europe Wednesday in an effort to free snowbound cities paralysed by a four-day blizzard.

Trains were moving again from East to West after East German soldiers and railmen cleared the main crossing from Poland at the border town of Frankfurt-Oder.

In Kiel, West Germany, hundreds of motorists marooned in their cars were freed when tanks and snowplows opened up two roads to Denmark.

But other road and rail links remained snowbound by the blizzards that have swept the continent since the weekend.

The French Riviera awoke to a rare sight today—several centimetres of snow covered the usually sunny streets.

Britons had been bracing themselves for another snowfall but a change in wind direction sent the snow in the direction of France instead. Although temperatures were still bitterly cold, British roads were passable and most trains were running on schedule.

However, birds fell from the sky and cars broke down on the Nullabor Plain in Australia because of a temperature of 45 degrees Celcius (125F.)

The temperature, at the small settlement of Cocklebiddy, was the highest ever recorded in Western Australia.

Closer to home, frigid cold from the central United States swept into the East and South on Wednesday, causing deaths, surfacing roads with ice, slowing commuters, damaging fruit crops and shocking millions out of a false sense of spring.

The story was similar from New England deep into Dixie. Freezing rain brought ice to New Hampshire.

With temperatures of -16C at Blairsville, Ga., and snow falling on the inauguration of Florida Gov. Bob Graham in Tallahassee, southerners were comparing their weather with Alaska where the lows were -11C at Anchorage and -10C at Juneau.

A storm that blew in off Lake Erie spread up to 40 centimetres of snow across much of New York, forcing the closing of meny schools and a 112-kilometre stretch of the New York State Thruway.

Utilities in Texas were asking customers to conserve power because cold temperatures had made natural gas transmission lines sluggish.

Thousands of suburbanites near Detroit endured brief power outages as winds of 32 kmph made the temperature outside feel like -40C shortly after midnight Tuesday. The outages, too, were blamed on cold.

In Canada, temperatures plummeted in the Maritimes late Wednesday after several days of unseasonable weather and a storm which brought gales and heavy rain.

The storm caused widespread power interruptions in southern New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and forced closure of the Halifax container port for 12 hours after several empty continers at the pier were blown over.

In New Brunswick, Fredericton was hardest hit, reporting 59 millimetres of precipitation. Saint John had 56 millimetres of rain and 2.2 centimetres of snow and Moncton was hit by 20.3 millimetres of rain.

Several Saint John suburbs experienced power interruptions as well as parts of the Moncton, Sussex and St. Stephen areas.

$50M Treasure Hunt Was 'Just Business'

NEW YORK (AP) — A Pennsylvania man who found a sunken treasure valued at up to $50 million says the search was just a business venture.

Burt Webber, whose team located the Spanish galleon Concepcion last November after a two-year search, is headed for Santo Domingo today for another six months of treasure hunting.

The Concepcion, a Spanish galleon that sank in 1641 during a storm off the coast of what now is the Dominican Republic, has already yielded gold and silver coins and other artifacts.

Historians have estimated the cargo of the Concepcion now would be worth between $10 million and $50 million. In 1687, an American named William Phips is reported to have removed 32 tons of silver from the ship.

He is the only other treasure hunter known to have found the Concepcion.

Webber says he has already regained his $500,000 investment and more, even though he must divide his find with the government of the Dominican Republic.

"I planned this venture as a business," Webber said at a news conference here Wednesday.

The 36-year-old Annville, Pa., man said he got into treasure hunting after giving up a military-diving career because of asthma. He went on his first Caribbean treaure hunt in 1961.

He then spent part of each year working in factories or as a bricklayer to support his wife, Sandra, and their four children.

Two years ago, he won the financial backing of a Chicago investment broker and founded Seaquest International to take aim at the Concepcion.

Webber's nine-man crew got nowhere until a Seaquest researcher, Jack Haskins of Florida, found a ship's log in England detailing Phips's voyage.

On Nov. 25, the Seaquest team set out again, finding the Concepcion within three days.

Webber said the remains of the ship and its treasure are scattered in sand pockets of a "wild coral jungle" in 10 to 15 metres of water.

"You wouldn't recognize it as a ship's wreck," he said. "The ship has disintegrated, deteriorated."

Truck Strike Threat To U.K.

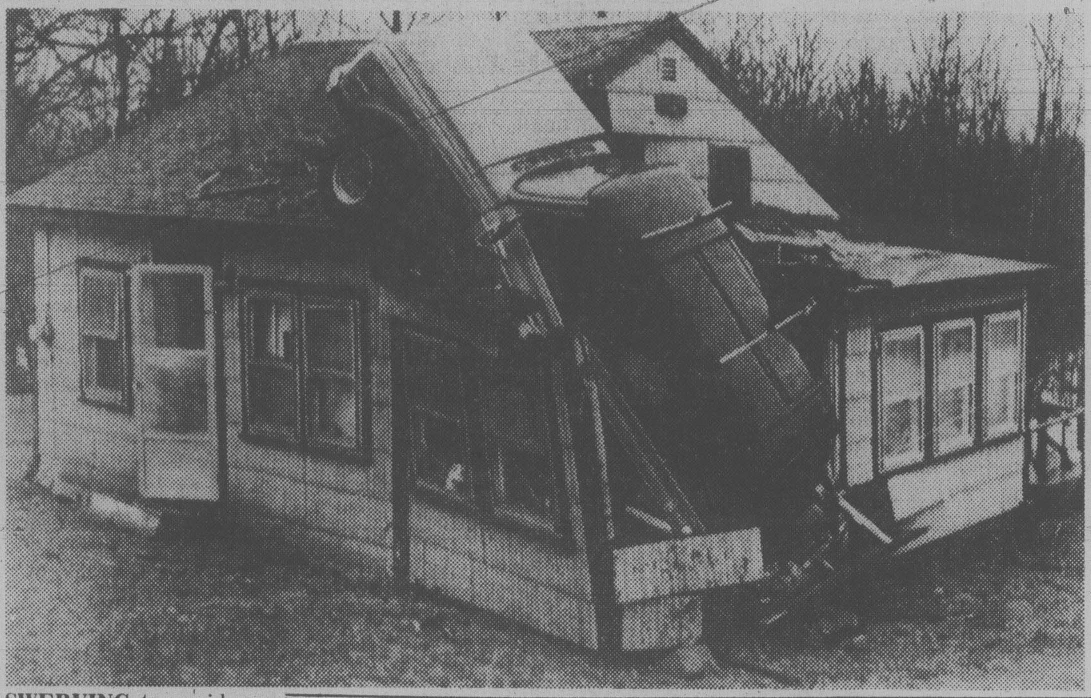
LONDON (Reuter) — About 30,000 truck drivers in Scotland and northern England went on strike Wednesday.

Officials said the strike may cripple the trucking industry, which in turn would cause severe food distribution problems.

The strike has already added to a serious vegetable shortage caused by freezing weather and blocked roads, officials said. Vegetable prices have doubled or trebled in the last few days.

The shipment of parts to automobile assembly plants also has been affected by the strike, which threatens the movement of milk, flour, meat and livestock and almost every facet of industry from steel making to chemicals.

The dispute centres on wages.



SWERVING to avoid an animal on the road, driver of this station wagon hit a sharp rise near Searsmont, Maine, and found himself airborne. Car came to rest against this house and only damage was to the structure.

Cabbages Theory On Kiwi UFOs

Times News Services

A New Zealand woman today offered a theory for the reported UFO sightings near her home — cabbage.

Mrs. Eru Pilcher of Kaikoura, near the Clarence River where a New Zealand television crew filmed so-called UFOs, explained, "I reckon what all these chappies are seeing is my cabbages reflecting off the clouds or something."

"I've got nearly a quarter of an acre of them — they are big beauties and their leaves shine in the moonlight."

Meanwhile, the Hebrew press today carried accounts of scores of Israelis who said they saw unidentified flying objects after watching television films of reported mysterious flying saucers.

On Wednesday night, Israel television broadcast film clips of reported UFOs in Australia and New Zealand.

Most of the Israeli reports came from Jerusalem. The newspaper Yediot Aharonot said some Israelis claimed they saw luminous, round objects even before the clip ran on television.

Solitary Worst

TOKYO (AP) — South Korean opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, released last week after more than three years' imprisonment, said Monday the worst part was the last year, when he was kept in solitary confinement under constant surveillance.

NOW BOAT PEOPLE VOW TO SWIM TO SANCTUARY

HONG KONG (UPI) — Thousands of refugees stranded in Southeast Asian waters today threatened to swim ashore if not granted immediate asylum.

Two refugees on the Panamanian-registered Huey Fong jumped into the South China Sea off Hong Kong in an apparent attempt to convince authorities the vessel's 2,700 passengers would try to swim to nearby Po Tai Island if they were not given temporary asylum in Hong Kong.

The two men "climbed back aboard of their own accord" after five minutes in the water, a government spokesman said.

Hong Kong authorities insist the freighter proceed to Taiwan, its first port of call, but Taiwan policy is to shelter only refugees of Chinese origin.

Philippine officials were rejecting demands from 2,400 refugees aboard the freighter Tung An.

Bombshell May Backfire

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe certainly let off a bombshell Wednesday with his announcement of strict provincial controls over local government spending.

The problems with it are the problems of most bombshells: it devastates a wide area to reach its goal of destroying a relatively small target, and innocent victims suffer through that devastation.

Essentially Wolfe imposed a mill rate freeze on all municipalities; limited spending increases for municipalities, regional districts and hospital districts to five per cent; and imposed general guidelines on school spending. The aim of the package, he said, was to ensure that no one in B.C. pays more property taxes in 1979 than he did in 1978.

Wolfe will probably be able to achieve that goal with the steps he has taken, but the costs may be far more than he expects.

The mill rate freeze will likely not be hard for most municipalities to meet because their assessment rolls will increase significantly as a result of the phasing in of the new assessment formula.

On the other hand, a few municipalities that did not choose the same phase-in formula as the others will be hard hit. It is theoretically possible that they would not be able to increase their budgets at all under the new orders because they will not have that automatic assessment roll increase.

The five per cent ceiling on spending increases will have a varied effect on municipalities and regional districts. In established communities, especially ones with budgetary surpluses from 1977 or 1978, it may be possible to keep the increase to five per cent without decreasing the quality of service appreciably.

But in a growing or expanding municipality, or in a regional district undertaking major capital projects, it will be virtually impossible to meet the ceiling without cutting back other badly-needed services.

Hardest hit of all, it seems, will be hospital districts. Hospitals say it will be absolutely impossible to meet the ceiling without cutting the quality of patient care drastically. Already hospitals in Victoria are running as close to the line as possible.

It makes sense that the guidelines laid down for school districts are a little less firm than those for other forms of local government. A high proportion of school district increases comes in the form of salary increases that are decided by arbitration and over which the school boards have no control. To force a school board to hold its budget to a five per cent increase if its teaching staff were all granted an eight or nine per cent increase would be to force serious cutbacks indeed in the quality of education.

However, that is about the only part of the ruling dealing with school boards that does make sense. The idea that school boards should have to meet with municipal councils before finalizing their budgets is ludicrous. School boards and municipal councils are parallel bodies, each elected by the same voters to handle different community services. It makes no more sense that municipal councils should have a chance to review school board budgets than it would to allow school boards to review municipal councils' allotments for garbage collection, police and so on.

We must also note the sheer hypocrisy of the government in even suggesting school board guidelines when last month it decided to force each school board to raise its mill rate, even a board so fiscally responsible as to decrease its total budget for 1979.

The larger question that must be asked in all of this is whether the provincial government should be setting down such regulations for local government at all. Legally, it certainly has the right to do so since all local governments are creatures of the province.

But it is most difficult to justify the government's actions when it is realized that almost all the groups affected are locally elected and directly responsible to their citizenry every year at election time. If a few councils or school boards have been irresponsible in allowing empire-building and overspending to get out of hand, surely that should be the problem of the electors in those areas, not the problem of the provincial government.

If the province is going to remove all responsibility from the locally-elected bodies, what is the point of having them at all? It may even be argued that Wolfe's actions will encourage local politicians to act irresponsibly — they can promise their electors the moon and then blame the provincial rules when they can't possibly fulfill those promises.

The new rules will certainly aggravate public apathy towards local government. Why should any citizens be interested when even the province says this government isn't capable of running anything?

Wolfe's actions may get the government a little short-term political gain from the voters who are pleased with their 1979 property tax bills. But when the longer-term ramifications of the actions begin to appear, the minister may find that his bombshell has backfired badly.

Trudeau Following Laurier

OTTAWA — According to insiders, Prime Minister Trudeau now refers more and more often in private to Wilfrid Laurier, the turn-of-the-century prime minister who governed for 15 years until the 1911 election when English Canada turned against him while Quebec remained loyal.

(Apparently, Trudeau refers quite often as well to Napoleon's battles. He will compare such and such a situation to Austerlitz, say, or Jena, although not, so far as I've been told, to Waterloo. Of this, make what you will.)

Back to Laurier. As he went, so Trudeau seems to be going.

The least interesting finding in this week's Gallup poll is that the Conservatives now lead the Liberals by 10 percentage points. This makes Joe Clark the next Prime Minister-Except-For-a-Minor-Miracle, and so makes him a target to be potshotted at by Liberals and by the press.

Two Political Nations

The poll's most interesting finding is that, politically, we have become two nations.

In English Canada, the Liberals have become a minority party. They have about 25 per cent of the vote in nine provinces, the same as the "third party" New Democrats. Depending upon the electoral breaks, each would win about 30 of the 200-odd English-speaking seats.

Quebec is another political country. The Creditistes are crumbling; the Conservatives cling to the two per cent share of the vote they won in 1974, and which won them just three seats. The Liberals, with two-thirds of the vote, are stronger here than are the Conservatives elsewhere. They could win 70 of Quebec's 75 seats.

These numbers aren't likely to change significantly. Trudeau may woo back English Canada (unlikely). Clark may woo Quebec (less likely, since to the call of the blood, Clark has no answer). Trudeau may quit (the least likely of all; anyway, the country's mood now seems to be to heave out not just Trudeau but all Liberals in sight).

Shold we therefore begin to lament the death of a nation?

Not in the least. For one thing, Canada never really has been a nation. For a magic moment in the 1960s, it seemed we might become one. As literary critic Northrop Frye has remarked, "Canada almost became a nation" when we adopted a national flag. It was composed of a single maple leaf, rather than of 10 maple leaves, or of nine leaves and one fleur de lys, which is the sort of design we'd get out of one of today's federal-provincial conferences. (Or of one codfish, one wheat sheaf, one fleur de lys, one oil well, one potato, and so on.)

The moment passed. Perhaps it never existed. Quebec always has been a nation unto itself. "Rump Canada," as someone brilliantly described the rest of us, always has been divided into regions. Among these, to stick in my own favorite oar, Newfoundland almost is a nation by itself.

For another thing, 1979's probable political polarization will do little more than confirm the obvious. Or even the less than obvious, since between Quebecers sticking by their own and the west sticking by John Diefenbaker, there is no essential difference.

A political polarization will reflect, at its core, our social reality. The national unity task force, for instance, will recommend what amounts to a "two nations" solution. Indeed, this is where we are: fewer and fewer anglophones in Quebec and fewer and fewer francophones elsewhere. Yet lots of ties still will bind us closely — geography, economics, history, and a new, upper middle class bilingual elite.

At the same time, Premier Rene Levesque keeps watering down his "sovereignty-association" proposal. It's main defect now is that it is so unimaginative. Levesque hasn't yet got around — he will soon, I bet — to proposing a joint, directly-elected parliament like that which, as of next year, will exercise suprasovereign authority over the nine independent countries in the European Economic Community.

Symbols Not Substance

Symbols rather than substance now are the principal differences between "sovereignty-association" and good, old-fashioned "special status." Further, between "special status" and status quo federalism, for all that it is supposed to be oppressive, colonialist and intolerable, the main differences also are mostly symbolic. Canada now is so decentralized that Quebec already just about has reached the goal that Levesque so quaintly describes as "le self government."

No doubt Levesque will do his best to exploit next year's probable political polarization. However, provided we carefully muddle up our terminology — yes, Quebec is sovereign; all provinces, though, are sovereign in their own jurisdiction; Canada is more sovereign than any of them — we should muddle through.

Anyway, none of this is new. Watching television the other night, I learned that in 1948 Canada at first refused to sign the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights because, as the embarrassed external affairs minister Lester Pearson explained, it might intrude upon provincial jurisdiction. Russia also refused to sign, but for different reasons.

Survival of the Afrikaners

NEW YORK — Visitors to South Africa usually get their news from the English-language newspapers. But while these journals are vigorous and outspoken, the Afrikaner press more importantly reflects and influences the Afrikaner government.

I took it as significant, therefore, when a half-dozen Afrikaner editors and commentators with whom I recently lunched in Johannesburg agreed that change in South Africa's repressive racial arrangements was necessary and inevitable. I suggested that, in view of the Afrikaners' position as part of a minority of less than five million whites in a country with nearly 19 million blacks, the basic Afrikaner need was to master the arts of minority group politics.

A look of shock and pain crossed the face of Dr. William de Klerk of Die Transvaaler, South Africa's most influential journalist.

No Interlopers

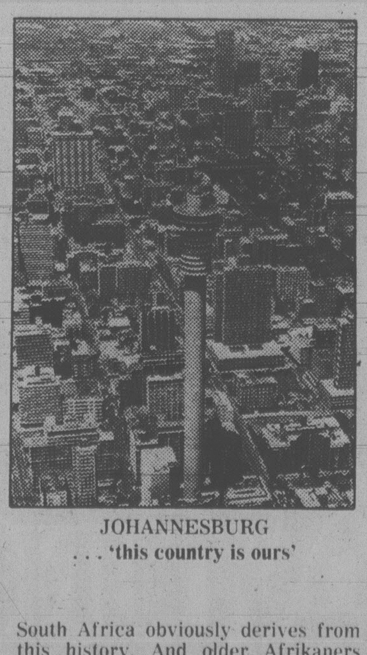
"No," he said after a moment. "I cannot accept that. This country is ours."

And that, I believe, is the root of the problem in South Africa. The Afrikaners, who have been in unchallenged power since 1948 and appear in no danger of losing that power by any means short of violent upheaval, are not colonial interlopers. Their history dates back more than 300 years to the founding of the Cape Colony by the Dutch East India Company. It is a singular history that gives them a mystical sense of their right to rule, a paranoid fear of subjugation and cultural disappearance, and a fierce independence.

Afrikaner history cannot adequately be retraced in a short article, but two of its most important episodes were the Great Trek (1836-1838) and the Boer Wars with the British (1880-81 and 1899-1902), the latter more recent than the American Civil War and at least as traumatic in Afrikaner memory.

The Great Trek was a northern migration of the Afrikaners (of Dutch, German and Huguenot descent) after the British seized the Cape Colony at the end of the 18th century. At the Battle of Blood River, a few hundred "voortrekkers" defeated thousands of Zulus — after Trek leaders had asked divine help and promised, if given the victory, to rule the land as God's domain.

After the Afrikaners founded the Transvaal Republic and the range Free State, the British moved in again — this time after the discovery of gold and diamonds in the Afrikaners' inland territory. The hard-fought Boer Wars (in which the Afrikaners claim a bit loosely to have invented modern guerilla warfare) finally brought the two republics forcibly into the Union of South Africa and the British Empire. The present republic relinquished dominion status in 1960 and withdrew from the British commonwealth in 1961.



JOHANNESBURG
. . . 'this country is ours'

The Afrikaners' lasting suspicion of the English-speaking whites of South Africa obviously derives from this history. And older Afrikaners today can remember when they and their parents were a downtrodden minority rather despised by their colonial masters. After Afrikaners regained political power in 1948, owing to a split in the English community, they ruthlessly set out keeping that power against all challengers. When "colored" — persons of mixed black and white descent — were disenfranchised, for example, it was less for overt racial reasons than from fear of a political alliance between English and colored voters.

The series of desperate conflicts with the Zulus and the British, all against seemingly overwhelming force, makes more understandable the Afrikaners' profound fear that their unique culture and heritage and language — all existing nowhere else — may somehow be wiped out. Their survival despite these conflicts, and their ultimate triumphs over blacks and British, contribute to their sense of mission. The essence of the violent Afrikaner history is defiance, self-reliance, independence.

When such a people are told, therefore, that their rule must yield to the majority of South Africans — a black majority at that — every Afrikaner instinct cries out in protest. Subjugation, cultural disappearance, the breaking of the Blood River pledge — all seem implicit in the idea of majority rule. Would not easy submission to such a prospect be a betrayal of those ancestors who time and again fought stubbornly against impossible odds, only to win final vindication? Might not such vindication yet crown the contemporary struggle?

What Kind of Change?

The Afrikaner also has more than his share of the world's endemic racism and contempt for black capabilities — an attitude he shares in varying degree with most English-speaking South Africans. But it is Afrikaner power and Afrikaner history that most fearfully complicates the racial situation in South Africa today and which makes an equitable solution hard to predict.

Despite the Afrikaner journalists' agreement on the need for change, for example, there was little agreement around the luncheon table on what change, let alone how much. And the consensus among these intelligent and obviously well-intentioned men was that the real problem was to devise same political means for the Afrikaner minority to avoid being "overwhelmed" and forced "to live by black standards," so that Afrikaners could continue to maintain themselves "as a nation and as a culture."

That does not bode well for far-reaching change by peaceful means. Even the Afrikaners know that the kind of change most amenable to them probably would be regarded by the growing black majority as no change at all.

Inaccuracies

We must take strong exception to certain gross inaccuracies contained in your editorial comment, Safe Driving Discount? Dec. 13.

While you acknowledge positive points in the insurance corporation operations with "Generally, the corporation does a good job . . ." you later charge us with misleading and spreading misinformation" in the application of the discount program. Unhappily, your editorial in the latter parts does exactly what you are accusing the corporation of doing.

Basically, the safe driving vehicle discount is a reward program to the vehicle owner for the safe operation of the insured vehicle over a fixed period of time — one, two or three years. In other words the vehicle owner, to earn the discount, must ensure that the vehicle for which he is responsible, regardless of operator or driver, is not in any way responsible for a claim and for which money has not been paid out on that specific insurance policy.

Your editorial writer must be corrected in two specific instances:

He writes: ". . . the driver rear-ended while stopped at a red light would not receive the discount."

This is not true! He will continue to receive the safe driving vehicle discount. No one loses a discount when they are not liable for an accident.

". . . in a parking lot or on a street, your vehicle has been sideswiped and rendered inoperable in a hit and run accident. You were nowhere near your car at the time and the other driver has long since fled . . ."

This is not true! Eligibility is not affected by hit-and-run claims, no-fault accident benefits or claims against comprehensive or specified perils coverage.

We view this as a very serious misrepresentation of the facts and would suggest an appropriate editorial be printed in your newspaper with reasonable prominence, rather than merely reproducing this letter in your letters column. — R. D. Egby, Manager, Media Relations, Insurance Corporation of B.C.

(Editor's Note: For whatever specific errors were contained in the editorial regarding hit-and-run or no fault claims, we apologize. However, we do not believe this changes the main point of the editorial — that the safe driver discount should not be named such when a driver can lose it for such "sins" as selling his car during the year.)

Marijuana Business Hits the Big Time

By WILLIAM SCOBIE

It's the third largest industry in the United States, according to the Commerce Department. Only Exxon and General Motors are bigger.

It's a mainstay of the Hawaiian economy, but a multi-billion dollar drain on California. It's a severe balance-of-payments headache for Washington, a war-without-end for law enforcement agencies and — as new medical research shows — a major health hazard.

But there's no stopping the marijuana juggernaut. Pot smuggling — once conducted by light planes and small, speedy boats — has moved into the big time. Today, large freighters drop anchor outside U.S. waters and send the weed ashore in cabin-cruisers. Four-engined DC-7s with 12 tons or more of marijuana regularly penetrate U.S. radar on low-flying missions.

"At least $50 billion worth of the stuff is getting through each year," says a Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) official. "I'd say around 25 airplanes a day are coming over that border (the 2,000-mile U.S.-Mexico frontier)." That's more than 9,000 flights a year. How many aircraft did the lawmen seize last year? "About 100."

If annual pot sales are indeed $50 billion, then the marijuana business ranks just below the top two American firms (both with yearly sales of $54 billion), and well ahead of corporate giants such as IBM ($18 billion). It also employs more than three million small-business salesmen, thousands of hard-core dealers and smugglers, and — at the top — a handful of big-time, multi-millionaire operators.

Their clients, according to U.S. officials, are some 16 million Americans who smoke "grass" on a regular basis, and the 40 million who take the odd puff.

For many years, Mexico was chief supplier to the firm of "Marijuana, Inc." Today, however, California — heartland of the grass culture — obtains most of its supplies from Hawaii and Colombia. There's also a flourishing, multi-million dollar home-grown pot industry, based in the secluded hills of northern California and southern Oregon.

The Mexican variety suffered a sharp declined in popularity when the Mexican government, prodded by the U.S., began spraying marijuana fields with herbicides which could cause lung and liver damage.

In Hawaii, says the DEA, pakalolo — "crazy smoke" — is one of the top three cash crops, probably as profitable as the state's $245 million sugarcane harvest. And because prized brands such as Maui Wowee and Kona Gold offer a higher high than Mexican grass, they fetch much higher prices on the California market. Low-grade Mexican brings only $150 a pound; but for a pound of top-quality Hawaiian, smokers pay at least $500 in the Golden State, more than $1,000 in New York.

"Colombian Gold" also retails for around $500 in California. The small-time dealer then peddles $50 "lids" (one ounce) on the street, turning a $300 profit on his pound. Says a DEA spokesman: "Marijuana accounts for around 30 per cent of the Colombian GNP. It's much bigger than coffee. Between $2 billion and $4 billion in American money is going to Colombia each year."

Most of that, officials believe, is eventually stashed away in secret numbered bank accounts in the Caribbean.

California pot is a much smaller business — less than 1 per cent of the total market, it's believed: but grass is still a multi-million dollar cash crop, and 40-acre spreads are not uncommon. In California's northern Humboldt County, police recently raided a score of farms, harvesting and destroying more than $6 million worth of marijuana.

California growers are proud of their very own contributions to the wonderful world of grass: sinsemilla, a specially cultured seedless hybrid with high THC (the active chemical ingredient) content. Only the resin-rich flower buds of the plant are used, making it the most prized pot of all. On the streets of New York a pound will fetch up to $3,000; in grass-rich Los Angeles, around $1,000.

California police seek out the fields with helicopters and undercover agents. But most of the farms are so well hidden in remote hilly areas that growers have more fear of armed bands of pot-thieves who raid the groves by night. "The growers are out there guarding their crops with shotguns," says Humboldt Sheriff's agent Chris Thiel. "We've had at least one killing."

Over the past year, projects like Operation Stopgap, which uses Navy satellites to track marijuana-smuggling boats, have had some success. The DEA claims that authorities have stopped 90 ships, seized more than 1,000 tons of grass and arrested 500 suspect smugglers.

But national attitudes toward marijuana are changing. The 40-year-old battle to wipe out the weed has cost billions in taxpayers' money; but no longer is the "killer weed" — as the old Federal Bureau of Narcotics liked to call it — so feared. Ten states have decriminalized possession, and studies show that lighter penalties appear to have little effect, one way or the other, on the number of users.

NORML, the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws, predicts that by 1980, at least half of the 50 states will have "decriminalized the weed, while keeping penalties for selling it. "We're moving toward an end to the era of pot prohibition," says NORML's director Keith Stroup. "Prohibition didn't work first time around. It isn't working now."

An Editorial

The headline rivets our attention: "Ottawa reviving plan to ease marijuana penalties." And here we have Justice Minister Marc Lalonde announcing that yes, he recognizes that "it may be a good time to re-examine our laws in this respect," and he wonders "whether you can continue to have a law that is really rejected by such a large number of our citizens." Sounds good. Sounds logical. Sounds hopelessly vague.

The minister must be familiar with the topic. It was Mr. Lalonde, in his former incarnation as minister of national health and welfare, who prepared a bill in 1974 to reduce the penalties connected with marijuana and hashish. The bill would have moved cannabis offences from the Narcotic Control Act (maximum prison sentence for possession, seven years) to the Food and Drug Act (maximum fine for possession, $1,000). It passed through the Senate in 1975 and died in the House of Commons. Three years later, Mr. Lalonde is considering another try, and "sources close to the minister" insist he is serious.

It would be nice to think so. Despite a Gallup report that 46 per cent of Canadians endorse the decriminalization of marijuana, and despite estimates that three million Canadians have used the drug, the government persists in maintaining that people who smoke marijuana are criminals. Last year, 33,281 Canadians were convicted of possession. Those who found the right judge received a conditional or absolute discharge, leaving the courtroom with something less than respect for a law which is not enforced. Those who received a criminal record and either paid a fine or served a sentence had no respect for a law which levels ridiculous penalties at people enjoying a recreational drug used by more than 10 per cent of their fellow citizens.

Mr. Lalonde says government officials are studying the matter "on an urgent basis" and will probably report to him by the end of January. At that point he may introduce appropriate legislation, but sees little hope that it will pass before an election is called. Is this a subtle hint that the only way Canadians can expect civilized drug laws is to re-elect the Liberals? Or is Mr. Lalonde merely re-defining the term "urgent," and preparing us for a few more years of tortured excuses from ministers who insist that there is a time for reform, but not yet?

On the face of it, it appears that both the Liberals and Conservatives are promising that, if elected, they may consider removing the criminal penalties from possession of marijuana. Where have we heard that line before?

Funky, Punky, Junky

In New York the silly people go to Studio 54 and dance all night and have their pictures taken wearing silly hair and then the pictures are published in magazines and silly newspapers. It's silly.

Not just anybody can get into Studio 54. This is one of its charms. You have to be officially certified "silly" at the door or you get the thumb, which is silly. Aware of this, hordes of people nevertheless troup up to the door every night, try to pass through and get rejected, which is really silly.

Imagine subjecting yourself to a public silliness test and failing right there on the street with everybody watching. Imagine the kind of person who would invite such humiliation. A silly person? You bet. But not big time, 90 proof silly. Not a genuine silly ass, but just a silly fool. There is a fine distinction. One gets to dance in the presence of Truman Capote and Andy Warhol while the other suffers the smirks of cabdrivers and settles for pasta at Mama Leone's.

The other day the cops arrived with warrants. They were not as silly as they should have been, but they got in anyhow with their silly warrants and hauled out a batch of papers and som cocaine. What a silly fuss.

Doesn't everybody know that all the silly people are snorting cocaine these silly days? "Saturday Night Live" on NBC makes silly jokes about snorting and we all sit there at midnight Saturday watching television, which is silly, and laughing because cocaine snorting, which is silly, is being beamed right into the family parlor.

Does all this sound silly? Well, what about Bianca Jagger hopping right aboard a jet in London and skying the Atlantic to show her support for the raided premises? The silly people are also called "The Jet Set." They fly the Atlantic as casually as people with digestive problems go to the delicatessen.

And what awaits them when they step off their jets? Limos. Do not be confused by "limos." It's merely the silly word for "limousines." On the night of the famous Studio 54 bust, according to the New York Post, "It was celebrities as usual . . . they were still arriving in limos at 3:00 this morning."

What a silly night. "This is New York's playpen," Lorna Luft, one of Judy Garland's daughters told a reporter. "I called up all my friends to come and support it."

Actress Marisa Berenson came. Designer Diane von Furstenberg. Soup can painter Andy Warhol. Best of all, the photographers came and took pictures of them all looking famous and beautiful and oft-photographed, oft-gossiped-about and silly.

The following day the final issue of "New Times" appeared on the newsstands. It is a silly magazine.

It did not publish photographs of silly people, whether they were looking oft-gossiped-about at Studio 54, on skis in Aspen, Colo., in their cups in Hollywood, doing the hustle in London or being naughty in Italy. A silly misreading of the American public, and most gravely did "New Times" answer for it.

With its Jan. 8 issue, just out, it ceases publication. It has been a good magazine that tried to flourish with good journalism about people and events of consequence. The audience wasn't there. Not silly enough, "New Times" succumbed to the mass preference for news of the silly people.

The final issue, with its theme of "Decadence: the People's Choice," is entirely devoted to the triumph of triviality in the public domain. "Welcome to America" begins its opening. "What'll it be? Have a drink, have a puff, have a snort, have some smack. Legalized gambling in the front room, skinflicks in the back, mirrors, mirrors everywhere in glorious profusion.

"C'mon in. Something for every palate. Reproductions by Rockefeller. Senators by David Garth, exploding Pinto by Ford. Hey, and that's not all. Carcinogens in 31 flavors, Opium from St. Laurent, Secanols from Graceland, poly-vinyl vaginas from Larry Flynt . . . funky, punky, junky . . . you want it, we got."

As you can see, they took things seriously at "New Times" and there was no market for that. The market was for Bianca flying in from London and for famous, beautiful, oft-photographed, outrageous, gossipy, silly people, which means that the bulk of us out here are sillier than the silly people who attend Studio 54, sillier even than the really silly people who go there to be turned away.

That is what silly really is. Or to put it in better silly prose — that is where silly is at.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market continued its sharp advance in active mid-afternoon trading today, spurred by sharply higher energy issues.

The TSE 300 index was up 6.55 to 1,337.78 in line with a 11.78 rise to 829.17 in the Dow Jones industrial index at New York.

Among the four most heavily-weighted groups within the 14-unit TSE composite index, oil and gas stocks climbed 21.61 to 1,902.55, metals and minerals 12.95 to 1,148.83 and financial services 3.54 to 1,196.59. Industrial products eased 2.66 to 1,063.44.

Management companies, up 28 points, led the six gainers among the other 10 groups. Utilities were the biggest of the four losers.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 3.72 million shares, up from 3.2 million at the same time Wednesday.

Advances led declines 247 to 154 with 192 issues unchanged.

A trading halt issued at Wednesday's opening continued in shares of Siebens Oil and Gas Ltd. pending contact with the company. The stock last traded at $38⅜ a share.

New Structure For Gold Trading

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Commodity Exchange has restructured its gold futures market in a move to improve trade opportunities in 100-ounce contracts.

The exchange has introduced five new 100-ounce gold futures contracts calling for delivery during the months of March, June, September and December, 1979 and March, 1980.

Trading facilities were withdrawn for contracts calling for delivery in November, 1979 and February 1980.

Facilities for February, May and August, 1979 contracts will continue to be provided as long as there are outstanding contracts calling for delivery in those months.

During the first day of trade under the new system the number of 100-ounce contracts traded increased to 38 from last Friday's total of two.

Exchange president Doug Ford says the change will allow commercial traders and the public to make the greatest use of gold futures options.

Because the new months coincide with delivery months traded elsewhere, traders will find it easier to take advantage of any differences in price between markets.

Also, Ford said, the new trading months will give proposed gold futures options a closer time relationship with existing Swiss cash gold options.

Washington Forecasts Stronger Steel Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strong year for the U.S. steel industry is expected in 1979 because imports probably will decline 20 per cent, the U.S. commerce department said.

The department's yearly steel forecast conflicted with some forecasts by the steel industry that the government will not be able to cut down foreign imports.

The U.S. steel industry often has been a pacesetter in industrial prices and the country's economic health as a whole.

The report said the steel industry's profits are improving in 1978 after a depressed year in 1977.

Steel companies are likely to increase their production by four per cent to more than 101 million tons, the department said.

It said imports will decline about 20 per cent to an estimated 16 million tons and exports will remain unchanged at 2.5 million tons.

The biggest demand for steel will be for office and industrial buildings and machinery, the report said.

It added: "Offsetting these factors is the estimated easing in passenger car and truck production and weak demand anticipated from the appliance industry."

Less demand also is forecast for residential housing and containers, which are becoming predominantly aluminum.

Steel production is likely to grow by 14 per cent to 111.0 million tons by 1983, the department said.

It said: "The slower rate of growth projected for the future reflects in large part the impact of smaller and lighter passenger cars."

The 97 million tons of steel produced in 1978 made up the third largest production total on record, exceeded only by the 1973-74 world steel boom.

Steel prices rose 8.7 per cent from July, 1977, to 1978.

Textile Firms Seek Investors

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians should invest $600 million in the textile industry within the next three years to keep up with growing national demand, says the economic research director of the Canadian Textile Institute.

In an interview published Wednesday William Berry said although private investors have been leery of risking capital in developing the industry, the federal government has done its best since late 1976 to support Canadian textiles by imposing import quotas and coming to bilateral agreements with some countries exporting to Canada.

Canadians are beginning now to recover part of their investment thanks to Ottawa, Berry said.

He added that to keep pace with the growing market, $200 million a year is invested in the Canadian industry by foreign interests, while Canadians invested $87 million in 1977 and were expected to invest $97 million in 1978.

Ottawa should encourage Canadian financiers to put up all or part of the $600 million needed by 1982, Berry said.

National Computer Link-Up

MONTREAL (CP) — Bank of Montreal customers will soon be able to deposit or withdraw money from their home-branch accounts at most of the bank's branches in other cities.

Starting Feb. 7, the Bank of Montreal is to introduce computerized services that will allow customers to conduct personal banking transactions at any branch in Canada linked up to the computer system, the bank announced Wednesday.

The service—called multi-branch banking—will tie together more than 900 of the bank's 1,239 branches.

Customers will be required to produce a Bank of Montreal Master Charge credit card or another special card issued by the bank to use the service.

term almost doubled to 18.5 per cent. Sixty-two per cent of those surveyed foresee little change.

Nevertheless, improved sales and profits in recent months appear to have convinced business leaders the outlook for them remains positive.

The strongest sector of the economy was the export market. More than 60 per cent expected to increase sales abroad in the next six months. They attributed a major part of this export potential to the low value of the Canadian dollar on world money markets. This allows Canada to sell at bargain prices abroad.

On a less optimistic note, more businesssmen than in the previous survey expect unemployment to worsen in the next half year. There now are 850,000 officially out of work.

More than half surveyed look for little change in the rate of inflation, which now is 8.8 per cent annually. The remainder were split—26 per cent expecting inflation to worsen and 23 anticipating some improvement.

The board found an increase in business leaders expecting the economy to suffer from labor disputes and rapid wage increases.

The Shah Leaves Tehran

A military flight left Ankara today carrying 67 Canadians and is due to land in Ottawa this evening.

A British Navy ship took about 60 on board, including some Canadians, and sailed from the southern Iranian port of Bandar Abbas where the evacuees had been working on a military base.

In Washington, a state department spokesman said the shah would be welcome in the United States if he decides to leave the country.

But Hodding Carter emphasized that the Carter administration is not advising the embattled shah to leave his throne.

Police in Beverly Hills, Calif., meanwhile, prepared for further violent demonstrations following Tuesday's outbreak at the hillside mansion of the shah's sister.

The 90-year-old mother of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Tadj Ul Moluk, was moved from the mansion to several hotels in the Los Angeles area for protection after the protest group battled police, destroyed at least to cars and set several fires.

Although not an Arab nation, Iran is predominantly Moslem like most of the Arab world, and Ayatullah Khomaini, the exiled religious leader of the fight against the shah, has called for an end to oil shipments to Israel.

Labor Gearing Up For Attack on Bill

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday night called on both public and private sector employees to conduct a high-profile fight against legislation which would expand the definition of essential services.

Council also condemned the provincial government for what it called "its arbitrary action aimed at curtailing the bargaining process for public sector unions."

Labor's wrath is directed at Bill 46, which put an end to the West Kootenay school district strike/lockout in December. The act contains a section which, although not yet proclaimed, would include municipal, regional and educational employees under the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Victoria union leaders voiced their concern about the legislation as organized labor in B.C. prepares its assault on the government action.

The B.C. Federation of Labor has mounted a campaign which will include a $100,000 advertising program and a number of protest rallies.

The federation's special public sector union committee will hold its first meeting in Vancouver Friday morning to plan the attack.

Later that day, federation staff members will also meet to discuss the committee's plans.

Saturday, representatives from B.C. locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will hold a special conference in Vancouver to discuss Bill 46 and all its ramifications.

Muriel Overgaard, president of CUPE's B.C. division, said the purpose of the conference is to educate the members on what the government move means.

The union is expected to support the federation's planned assault and come up with some strategy of its own.

Those attending the conference will also discuss a plan by the union to file a complaint with the Labor Relations Board that the West Kootenay school trustees failed to bargain in good faith.

The trustees and CUPE employees in Nelson, Trail, Castlegar and Grand Forks were involved in a lengthy strike/lockout situation until the government brought in back-to-work legislation at a special session of the legislature Dec. 8.

Neil Hindle of the boilermakers union described the legislation as insidious.

He said it was brought in by a government which seems bent on "shackling organized labor."

On the same theme, Roger Lewis, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said if janitors in the West Kootenays can be looked upon as essential than it won't be long before IWA members find themselves in the same position.

Council president John Shields said the government axe is taking little chips at the labor movement.

"When they start swinging that axe at the trunk of the trade union movement it is all of us who are going to be affected."

Lending Rate Up Effective Friday

rent nine-per-cent level. All other interest and lending rates are under review, they said.

The Conservative industry critic, John Crosbie (St. John's West), warned that construction, especially housebuilding, will be hard-hit by the interest rate increase.

The industry, already experiencing high unemployment and virtual stagnation, would suffer even more as mortgages become more expensive.

However, mortgage lenders said it could be some time before rates are increased. Although the bank rate has gone up nearly four percentage points in the last year, mortgage rates have increased by less than half this amount because there is an ample supply of money available.

Al Maltman, spokesman for the Bank of Montreal, said there is "a fair bit of mortgage money floating around that has to find a place to roost."

Crosbie said the Conservatives, like the government, are worried about the weakness the dollar has exhibited on world money markets over the last year. The dollar traded today at 81.20 cents—up slightly from its value of less than 84 cents one day earlier. Since January it has dropped in value from 91.5 cents U.S.

But he said it is wrong for the central bank to "blindly follow the U.S. like satraps" every time interest rates go up south of the border.

Crosbie rejected the reasoning of Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, who explained this week's bank rate increase by saying it is essential to keep Canadian interest rates above those of the U.S. in order to keep capital flowing into the country.

The U.S. prime rate is 11.75 per cent.

Bouey said it is necessary to keep international investment money coming into Canada to offset the country's current account deficit.

Mike Rygus, vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, called the Bank of Canada move "economic insanity."

He warned the increase in interest rates will contribute to difficulty in collective bargaining in the months ahead.

Depression Gene Isolated?

ple for depression born of this gene."

Comings said he identified the abnormal gene after a fruitless search for the gene responsible for a rare neurologic disease known as Huntington disease, a degenerative ailment of the central nervous system. Huntington disease is always fatal. It is perhaps best known as the disease that claimed the life of folk singer Woody Guthrie.

Separating genes from the brains of dead victims of Huntington disease, Comings said he found no signs of an abnormal gene that behaved like it might be a case of the rare brain disorder.

But in looking at the brains of stroke and heart attack victims to be matched against those dead of Huntington disease, Comings discovered the mutant gene he called Pc 1 Duarte in about 30 per cent of the victims of stroke and heart attack and more than 50 per cent of the victims of multiple sclerosis.

"We looked for this gene in schizophrenics and couldn't find it," Comings said. "Then a doctor in St. Louis donated to us 28 brains of people who had a medical record of depression and who had committed suicide. We found the gene in 65 per cent of the brains."

Just as important, Comings found a double dose of the abnormal gene in 20 per cent of the St. Louis suicides, meaning they had received the gene from both their mothers and fathers. Only 2½ per cent of the stroke and heart attack victims showed evidence of a double dose of the brain gene.

"This told us that if you had the mutant gene," Comings said, "your risk of being depressive runs much greater than if you don't have it."

Comings conceded his finding is not conclusive evidence that the gene causes mental depression but said it is almost surely involved. "Either this gene is the only gene involved," he said, "or it is one of the genes involved."

Later work with the brains of dead alcoholics showed almost the same frequency of the abnormal gene as it existed in depressives — which Comings said strongly suggests that the gene is a cause of chronic alcoholism.

Still to be identified is the environental "trigger" that acts together with the gene to produce depression.

Three Inches of Ice . . . on Inside

Gil Smith with a relic that was used for measuring barometric pressure

By AB KENT
Times Staff

BACK IN THE DAWN of his career Gil Smith weathered 60-below winters in a remote northern outpost of the Canadian meterological service.

Today at 57, after more than 31 years as a met technician, he can look back and say he enjoyed the life he shared in a Beatton River shack where three inches of ice would coat the inner walls while he and his wife slept.

But is it any wonder he likes Victoria, where he has spent 22 years at Gonzales Observatory, the last 10 as officer in charge of the climate data centre?

"There's something about Victoria . . . I enjoy life here. I certainly like the climate," Smith said.

His retirement is the second this month from the white-domed structure dominating the Gonzales district, following senior met technician Jack Bell, who spent his entire 28 years of service in the Victoria weather ffice.

Smith has seen the development of Gonzales from a 24-hour manned weather reporting station into the statistical and supply centre for the Pacific region of Canada's Atmospheric Environment Service.

It remains a small link in the national weather reporting network, but it is no longer manned around the clock and automated equipment allows weather information to be transmitted remotely during the night.

As a data centre, Gonzales supplies "a tremendous quantity of weather information," mostly to other government agencies in Canada and the U.S., but also to industry, agriculture and consulting firms.

Equipment and techniques of the past are preserved in a permanent display set up by Smith for the 10,000-11,000 visitors who climb the hill to the observatory each year.

In leaving, he hopes the building itself will be designated and remain a heritage structure, even though its future role in AES may be uncertain.

Smith worked with three well-known forecasters in Victoria — William Mackie and Allan McQuarrie in the 50s and 60s, both of whom are retired — and lately Norman Dressler. He first worked with McQuarrie two years in Calgary in the early 50s before he was transferred to Victoria.

Smith joined the met service at Edmonton airport, fresh out of the artillery where he served more than five years and survived the abortive Dieppe raid, the invasion of Europe and a stint in the Italian campaign.

He was posted to Yellowknife as an observer technician, the only weatherman among a group of radio range technicians concerned with keeping aircraft on course in the trackless bush and tundra, and in all spent about five years in northern postings.

HE ALWAYS HAD a fancy for Victoria, where he had come on holiday as a boy from Lethbridge, and where he spent a few months with an anti-aircraft battery early in the war. Smith raised his two daughters here and plans to stay.

He is president of the 16th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery Association, a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, curls, gardens, goes fishing, collects stamps, makes wine and as of last year has become a golfer.

"I've enjoyed my career with the department and it's been rewarding in many ways," he said.

"I have seen a good part of the country, and in all the places I've been, I've never met anyone in the civil service that I've disliked. I've had lots of disagreements with people. But they are very dedicated and above average intelligence."

He said the service has changed, with seniority counting less than ability for advancement: "It's like any other job today. If you don't cut the mustard, you're out."

Municipal Layoffs Feared In Wake of Budget Curbs

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said today the government's action in restricting municipal budgets might mean staff layoffs.

He hoped, however, the move won't adversely affect current negotiations with the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Smith, head of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, said with the province ordering regional and municipal budgets held to five per cent increases some staff reductions might be necessary — but he hoped not.

"Lay-offs and cuts of service are something we don't want and I don't think our taxpayers want to any large degree either."

He added that a lot will depend on CUPE's wage demands.

"I'm hopeful of a settlement . . . they realize it's not a particularly fat time for municipalities."

CUPE officials could not be contacted for reaction to Smith's remarks, but a CUPE delegate told Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night the government's action to control municipal spending was a direct blow at labor. (See page 8.)

William Doherty said the move was in line with federal and provincial policy to prevent public sector employees from "even keeping up with rising inflation."

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe announced Wednesday a freeze on the municipal general purpose mill rate at the 1978 level.

Wolfe said that increases in municipal and regional and hospital district budgets will be limited to five per cent, and that municipalities will be required to use their unspent 1977 and 1978 reserves as revenue during 1979.

Former NDP finance minister Dave Stupich said the government's move will have a depressing effect on the economy.

"It is intended to be smart politics rather than good economics," Stupich said.

"At this time when so much labor is unemployed, municipalities should be encouraged to embark on public works projects rather than wait until the economy improves when they will be competing for scarce labor and scarce materials," the Nanaimo MLA said.

"The economy needs that kind of a shot in the arm rather than the depressing effect of this kind of a policy."

The former finance minister said the five-per-cent ceiling on budget increases "in view of a nine to 10-per-cent inflation rate is in effect a cutback."

"For the provincial government to impose that kind of a cutback when it influences as much of the economy as it does, is bound to have a depressing effect."

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the government's action is an interim measure.

"I'm hoping that over the next year we can develop a more rational approach to the whole question."

He said he is sure the policy will be viewed by some municipalities as an infringement.

"I guess in part we can't avoid appearing that way," Vander Zalm.

"It's not directed at those municipalities which are budgeting in a manner which will accomplish the five per cent or less in any case.

"We're looking at those which would be considerably above that and those that have managed to put away some considerable surpluses."

He said the policy is a good guideline for all municipalities to follow.

"If they are already doing it, they have no concern; if they're not, then they should be looking at their books because we will be."

George Ferguson, president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, said most municipalities agree with the idea of fiscal restraint, but object to Wolfe's methods.

"There was no consultation with any level of government over this," he said. "They (the provincial government) are saying school boards and municipalities are not capable of running our own financial affairs."

Municipalities would prefer a system of voluntary restraint with the five-per-cent figure being used as a guideline, he said.

Child Act Draws Fire

The Victoria Civil Liberties Association is unhappy with the provincial government's proposed new Family and Child Services Act.

In a two-page critique sent to Vic Belknap of the Children's Legislation Committee, the association said the legislation fails to provide children with the right to independent legal representation and neglects to establish a guaranteed level of care for children.

Association members also expressed concern over the lack of adequate definitions of terms such as "abandoned, neglected, abused, and deprived," in the act, and said they fear the legislation would be operated by regulation rather than statute.

In addition, the association said it is concerned about the consequences of a central registry recommended by the act.

The registry would list the names of persons who have allegedly abused or neglected their children.

The association wants some guarantee names would be removed if circumstances changed.

Association president Frank Preston said in an interview the committee has misgivings about the general philosophy of the legislation and the possible effect it will have on low income families.

He said the act would be no improvement over the 78-year-old Protection of Children Act it is meant to replace.

"Indeed there are some among us who feel that in view of present day needs it would be worse," he said.

Preston said the government has failed to look at the total picture of family and children's law.

"The government said this act would be the cornerstone of more family legislation," he said. "If that's the case, they should carpet the whole thing, and start again."

Q. How many universities has Britain? J.L.

A. There are 45 universities in Britain, including the Open University. The Open University is a non-residential university which provides part-time degree and other courses, using a combination of television and radio broadcasts, correspondence courses. Standard of degrees are the same as those of other universities.

Sun Eclipse Feb. 26

The only total eclipse of the sun in North America for the next 45 years will be visible Feb. 26 from Victoria and other southern B.C. points.

In Victoria about 98 per cent of the sun's surface will be obscured by the moon at the peak of the phenomenon, making the sky as dark as it would be just after sunset.

People should not look at the sun without some eye protection. Permanent damage could result.

Astronomer Ernie Pfannenschmidt said the total obscurity would be 2½ minutes although the partial eclipse will last about two hours, reaching its peak at 8:13 a.m. in Victoria.

The path of the total eclipse — about 150 miles wide — will cross the Pacific and touch the continent at Portland, Ore., about 7:11 a.m.

It will continue in a northeasterly direction across Southern Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Northern Ontario, Hudson Bay, the Arctic and Greenland.

The National Research Council will record solar corona and upper atmospheric changes before and during the eclipse, launching 34 instrument-carrying rockets.

Action Starts On Late Taxes

More than $1 million in city taxes was still owing at the end of December, Ald. Murray Glazier said today.

(See also page 33.)

Glazier, chairman of council's finance committee, said city hall has started action to recover the taxes and expects to have most of the money within four or five months.

Writs will be issued immediately to all those who owe the city more than $3,000 and if that doesn't succeed steps will be taken to seize properties.

The chasing of overdue taxes is an annual game and city hall seldom has to go as far as selling properties to get its money.

In December, 1976, there was $589,500 in tax arrears and by March all but $38,000 had been collected. In December, 1977, there was $700,000 outstanding and by August everything had been paid.

The overdue $1.1 million represents 3.8 per cent of total taxes receivable by the city.

Glazier said the city has to set aside funds in its budget to cover the overdue amount, which is unfair to the taxpayers who have to take up the slack.

Are You Ready for Metric Gas?

Figuring out the price of a tank of gas will soon be simpler for Victoria motorists who keep pocket calculators in their glove compartments.

Spokesmen for major oil companies said Wednesday they are almost ready to convert pumps to the metric system.

A Gulf Canada Ltd. spokesman predicted the switch from gallons to litres could take place until the end of 1980 to complete the metric conversion.

At Gulf the changeover will take place simultaneously at all company-owned stations.

Shell Canada Ltd. said it will ease into the metric system, gradually converting pumps over three months.

Imperial Oil controls only a handful of the stations it supplies and said decisions when to convert will be made by individual operators.

Service stations have until the end of 1980 to complete the metric conversion.

Since most pumps contain converter kits, the actual changeover is as simple as turning a key or pressing a button.

Right now the biggest headache is changing the price signs on the gas pumps.

Some of the older pumps at independent stations can't be converted and owners will have to install new ones.

The oil companies have switched their service station delivery systems to metric and are canning oil in litres.

They are waiting for existing stocks of oil to run out before putting new litre containers on the shelves.

Domestic furnace oil deliveries will change to metric in September.

The pumps will be checked by government inspectors to verify their accuracy.

Companies have been urged not to use the conversion to make new price increases.

Price-conscious motorists can make their own comparisions by using a slide-rule type of calculator (available from the metric commission) to figure out the metric or Imperial equivalent for any gasoline price.

The standard conversion figure is 4.5 litres to the gallon.

The Subtle Memories That Will Linger On

Sort of a quick look back, if you like, at part of what went on before 1978 ran out, and in no particular order. And what was the moment you remembered best?

For instance, if you were a baseball fan, was it the terrific stretch drive of the Yankees, their succesful head-to-head fight with the Red Sox, then the World Series? Always there was the thought the despised pin-stripes would succeed because of two people — the slender Ron Guidry and the boorish Reggie Jackson and not ever because of owner George Steinbrenner.

Guidry enjoyed his finest hour and normally all he had to do was throw his glove on the mound and the other club went doggo. Then, when he didn't have his famous fast ball against the Dodgers, Graig Nettles put on a spectacular fielding show to save him, the Yankees and, in this book, the series.

Jackson was always the feared slugger, more so perhaps after he was struck out by rookie Bob Welch in that historic "kid meets vet" confrontation. Everyone just knew, however, that if they were to meet again the Dodger youngster, who had thrown his blazing fast ball by Jackson in that first meeting, likely wouldn't be as fortunate again. He wasn't. Jackson saw to that. Ball gone. Game over. A young man's brand new image shattered and his team in disarray.

As for ex-Yankee manager Billy Martin, at least he fought Steinbrenner, and anybody else who wanted a piece of the action. And what was it he said of Jackson and Steinbrenner: "The two of them deserve each other; one's a born liar, the other's convicted."

And on the way up are some Victorians.

Roy Moretti got his chance with the baseball Mussels and proved as good as they had including what was sent to the club from major league outposts. Now he has a chance to be a Blue Jay; and his father, Ray, a fine amateur player here in days past, should be proud indeed. It brought back memories of years ago and the fact that, the higher one goes, the harder it is to get the side out. But oh, well.

There's much to look for in sports: And remember the story out of London that an 18-year Victoria girl, Wendy Barlow, had knocked off the world's best junior player, Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and suddenly had qualified to play at Wimbledon. Hey! That was news! Here was a girl from the old home town, the name having appeared in the press from time to time as she moved through her teens as the best of her age class. But now — a dream is fulfilled. Just like that. It's not that simple to join the Wimbledon set. Later that day a chance meeting with Wendy's proud father, Bob Barlow, the former professional hockey player. And he was saying: "No, I don't think I will go over this year. I knew she was going to make it one day, but she's still a year or two away from her best. She'll be at the top one day. I just know it. And I'll be there then." Faith is a wonderful thing and Wendy's parents have it in their talented daughter's ability.

And how about those classic lacrosse battles between Shamrocks and Burrards. Each team despises the other, no matter what is said, and that's the way they played the game, hard, tough, with no quarter asked or given. If you've been away from lacrosse — or haven't been introduced — pick a Shamrock-Burrard clash this spring and you'll be a convert and a Ward Sanderson hater, all rolled into one.

Call him what you will, however, but Sanderson, a bully in his own way, dominates the scene when he wants to; and the thought always strikes home — what a player he would be if he had the pure talent of a Ron MacNeil . . . or an Ivan Thompson . . . or a Kevin Alexander. So now he's a hero? Not really, but he did beat the Irish, and other teams, at times, just by throwing his stick on the floor. And you better believe it.

That's some of the recall. Just like meeting the young riding sensation, jockey Steve Cauthen, at the opening of the Exhibition Park thoroughbred season. What poise for a youngster and then later watching him ride Affirmed to the Triple Crown. And quick now, what was the name of that other horse Affirmed beat in the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont? Yes, the Affirmed-Alydar meetings were classics too, just as was the stretch drive between Exceller and Seattle Slew, described by some as one of racing's finest stretch duels ever.

The Canucks? Too bad. Alas. Again. And after such promise too. The B.C. Lions? Too bad. Alas. Again. The Whitecaps? No "alas" there because: hey, man, that was the happening of the year in B.C; and who would have thought that the Whitecaps would outdraw the Lions?

Otherwise, the et als can wait, and me, too, but only until the next spring salmon fishing run. 'Cause when you get a phone call from a loving daughter, saying, "hey, Dad, guess what Stew (her husband) caught this morning?". There was a laugh and a joke until the answer came back:

"Two fifties and a 23 pounder . . . and he lost one."

And you think I don't remember?

Happy '79.

Volleyball Vikings Facing Japanese

UVic Vikings have their work cut out for Saturday.

That's when they play host to the Japan University All-Stars in an exhibition men's volleyball match starting at 7:30 p.m. in the McKinnon Gym.

Although the team is an unknown entity, it's coach is world-renowned for his training techniques. Coach Masaru Saito was also the assistant coach for the Japanese men's team that won the gold medal in Munich at the 1972 Olypic Games.

The visiting squad faces B.C. Olympics in Vancouver before heading south for five matches in the U.S. and returning home.

A preliminary women's game between the British Columbia Canada Winter Games team and Victoria Spice is scheduled for 6 p.m.

Leafs, Merchants Start With Wins

Esquimalt Maple Leafs and Juan de Fuca Merchants started 1979 off on the right foot with victories in South Island Big Six Hockey League play Wednesday.

Leafs tripped Western Homes Buckaroos 9-1 at Esquimalt Sports Centre and Merchants defeated Duncan Silver Park Blades 7-2 at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Chris Riddell scored four goals to spark the Leaf attack and singles were added by Rob Coldwell, Gerry Blanchette, Ron Pool, Rugs Pritchard and Bob Martin, who also had four assists. Ross Swanton replied for Bucks.

Don Hansen led Merchants with three goals while Barry McLachlan, Dennis Head, Tom Wilson and Randy Kerr contributed singles. Doug Lafleur and Dave McDonald replied for Duncan.

SOMETHING TO CELEBRATE: New York forward Anders Hedberg raises his stick in triumph as he skates behind Montreal Canadien netminder Ken Dryden after scoring Rangers' final goal in 6-2 National Hockey League triumph Wednesday. The victory at New York ended Montreal's 15-game unbeaten streak. (AP Wirephoto).

'Permissiveness' Hurts Cats Again

Jack Shupe wasn't far off base.

Earlier this week, the coach of the Victoria Cougars, who stood only three points behind Portland Winter Hawks, expressed the view that "it will take some doing" to overhaul the Western Hockey League rivals for the honor of finishing first in the Western Division.

Shupe made the observation after considering both teams' first-half record and the six games-in-hand enjoyed by Portland.

Shupe's Cougars now are five points behind the Winter Hawks after a 5-2 loss in Portland Wednesday, and Victoria's overhauling task may not get easier because of the Cats' permissive ways.

The Cougars keep allowing the Winter Hawks to get off the hook.

In two games at Victoria earlier this season, the Cougars had victories in their grasp but the Hawks rallied to escape from Memorial Arena with a win and a tie. And Victoria enjoyed another opportunity for advancement Wednesday but failed to take advantage.

The Hawks took the ice before 2,189 hometown fans without six top players — goaltender Bart Hunter, defncemen Dave Babych, Keith Brown and Blake Wesley and forwards Mike Toal and Perry Turnbull. The Cougars were without one important front-liner — centre Gary Lupul.

Lupul and Brown were returning from the world junior tournament after bolstering New Westminster Bruins while Portland's other five helped form the all-star team that represented the WHL in the Labatt Cup tournament in Ontario last week.

Talent-wise, the advantage belonged to Victoria.

But five Portland farmhands, called up from the Alberta Junior League, filled in well and the Cougars compounded their problem by coming up with a flat performance, especially defensively.

The Cougars weren't too bad offensively but had tm contend with Clint Malarchuk, a 17-year-old netminder from Fort Saskatatchewan and one of the five farmhands called up for the game.

Malarchuk was outstanding as he held the Hawks together for two periods to allow Portland's attack to get into action. Three of the five Portland goals came on power plays, but the Hawks' most obvious benefit came from Victoria's defensive errors.

Even the presence of defenceman Mark Robinson, playing his first game in more than three months, didn't help. Robinson and captain Geordie Robertson both returned to Victoria's lineup after recovering from knee injuries but couldn't provide the needed lift. Robertson saw only limited action, late in the game and only during power-play situations.

Trailing 2-1 early in the third, the Cougars were still very much in the game until a pair of goals in a 23-second span put Portland in complete command.

In the only other game played Wednesday, Billings Bighorns wrecked Sheldon Ferguson's debut as coach of Medicine Hat by trouncing the Tigers 7-1 in the Southern Alberta city. Ferguson recently replaced Vic Stasiuk as the Tiger coach.

Cougars now move on to Billings for games Friday and Saturday.

NANCY LOPEZ
. . . athlete of year

Nancy Tops Poll

Nancy Lopez, golf's first pin-up girl who could win tournaments, was the runaway recipient of The Associated Press female athlete of the year award, it was announced Wednesday.

The 21-year-old Lopez, who won a record $189,813 as a rookie in 1978, received 336 votes out of 412 cast by sports writers and broadcasters around the country, becoming the first golfer to win the award since Kathy Whitworth in 1966. Chris Evert, the award winner in 1974, 1975 and 1977, was a distant second with 25 votes, followed by tennis stars Tracy Austin, 14, and Martina Navratilova, 11, and swimmer Tracy Caulkins, 10.

Canucks' Act Finally Jells

Times News Services

Vancouver put its scoring act back together and goalie Dunc Wilson returned to Pittsburgh a winner when the Canucks defeated the Penguins 5-3 in a National Hockey League game Wednesday night.

The defeat broke Pittsburgh's three-game winning streak. The Canucks had lost their last two games by shutouts, 9-0 to New York Islanders on Tuesday and 4-0 to Los Angeles Kings last Saturday, and saw their scoreless string extended to a seventh straight period before rookie Stan Smyl ended the Vancouver famine that extended 154 minutes and 37 seconds.

Wilson, who was the top Pittsburgh goalie two years ago, stopped 48 shots and the Canucks overcame Pittsburgh's 2-0 first-period lead.

"It's a good win," said Wilson after playing his third game of the season. "We got some breaks and we kept working. But I was lucky on a few shots."

Wilson's contract was not renewed by the Penguins this season and he played with a minor league team before he was picked up by Vancouver.

The goalie believes he was unfairly treated by the Penguins' organization after former coach Ken Schinkel was replaced by Johnny Wilson. But he said the problems were over even if the hard feelings linger.

"I'm happy now. As far as what went on before, it's just another chapter in the book," said Wilson.

Vancouver's winning goal was scored by Tom Gradin at 2:19 of a wild third period in which Pittsburgh had 20 shots on goal. Don Lever added the insurance goal, his second of the game, at 17:21. Ron Sedlbauer, with his 25th of the season, accounted for Vancouver's other goal.

In New York, the Rangers — with the help of a determined effort and some wild and crazy bounces — got goals from six players to upset the Canadiens 6-2 to end Montreal's 15-game unbeaten streak and snapped their nine-game unblemished mark on the road. It also was New York's second win over Montreal in as many games this season.

New York, which continually pinned Montreal in its own end, got one of its goals from defenceman Dave Maloney—his first in 27 games.

"That's what won the game for them: odd goals by players who don't usually score," observed Canadien winger Steve Shutt after Maloney connected and Nick Fotiu added his second of the season.

Elsewhere, Boston's hockey equipment went to San Francisco instead of Chicago on and the Black Hawks were sorry it ever arrived.

After a delay of 75 minutes to await the equipment, the Bruins—who spent nine hours on an airplane and didn't get to sleep until the daylight hours Wednesday morning—took a 6-3 win over the Hawks.

The Boston players spent nine hours in the air because of snow-covered runway problems at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.

In other games, Atlanta Flames beat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1, Washington Capitals defeated Los Angeles Kings 8-3 and St. Louis Blues tied Minnesota North Stars 3-3.

DON MURDOCH

Guarantee For Merger?

EDMONTON (CP) — The success of the World Hockey Association's third attempt at a merger with the National Hockey League could depend on an insurance company.

The Aetna Insurance Co., a partner in the group that owns the New England Whalers' franchise, has agreed to guarantee any legal judgment against WHA clubs, league president Howard Baldwin said Wednesday night.

The role of Aetna means no WHA or NHL club will "have to dig into their jeans to put up dollars for any lawsuit."

Murdoch Suspension Lifted

NEW YORK (CP) — He was just a chubby-cheeked kid with powerful wrists from helping his father haul 190-pound aluminum beer kegs for customers in Cranbrook, B.C.

For Don Murdoch, now in the good graces of the National Hockey League, life was a jumble. It happened too fast and almost destroyed him.

From the juniors to the majors in New York in one year. He was an instant celebrity for a while, often over-publicized, but he could score with his wrist shot.

They eat up celebrities like Murdoch, new to the bright lights. The wrong company, a drug bust, and a costly suspension carved up his NHL career for a while.

But NHL president John Ziegler gave him a second chance Wednesday. Ziegler lifted Murdoch's one-year suspension, limiting it to 40 games—condition based on the forward's good behavior.

The 22-year-old right winger of New York Rangers will begin his third season Jan. 10 against Colorado Rockies—the Rangers' 41st scheduled game.

"Other athletes who were dealers were caught in other sports," Murdoch said in an interview.

They hurt other persons. Murdoch hurt himself.

"The stuff was found on me. It was a mistake, although I think a mental mistake. "I was only 20 then. None of the guys were around when I stayed in New York that summer. I got into the wrong crowd."

Murdoch was a rough-and-ready junior, playing for $400 a month when he scored 80 goals in 70 games for Medicine Hat Tigers. That was in 1976. The next season, the Rangers drafted him and he was in New York. Murdoch scored 16 goals in his first 16 games for the Rangers. He became an instant hero.

He had 32 in 59 games for the 1976-77 season, cut short when a dislocated tendon in his left ankle finished him in February.

It was a long period of idleness that bothered him. Then came his arrest at Toronto International Airport with 4.5 grams of cocaine in his luggage during a trip in August, 1977. His case finally came up after another season with the Rangers in April, 1978.

A Canadian court in Brampton, Ont., gave him a suspended sentence and fined him $400 after he pleaded guilty to possession.

Ziegler slapped Murdoch with the one-year suspension last July 24, the first player ever busted for drugs in NHL history.

Murdoch wants to avoid controversy whether the punishment fitted the crime in his case. But he feels he was made an example as a warning to others.

"I was the first one. If it ever happens to somebody else, they're certainly going to relate to my case."

Ziegler said the lifting of Murdoch's suspension after 40 games shouldn't indicate any change in NHL policy.

"If a player in the NHL wishes to use illegal drugs and if this is discovered, he will lose his privilege of playing in the NHL."

Trade Denied

BALTIMORE (AP) — Quarterback Bert Jones of Baltimore Colts will not be traded to Oakland Raiders for quarterback Ken Stabler or anyone else, Colts assistant general manager Ernie Accorsi said today.

"The Colts will not trade Bert Jones," Accorsi told Dave Humphrey of WCBM Radio in Baltimore. "Bert Jones will not be acquired by the Oakland Raiders. There's nothing to the story.

Barry Tompkins, of KRON-TV in San Francisco, reported Wednesday the Raiders planned to announce the acquisition Jones.

The Raiders scheduled news conference today a p.m. PST; which the National Football League team said would be "very important," but no details were given.

NASL Recruiting Tactics Hit

LONDON (AP) — Ian Greaves, manager of Bolton Wanderers of the English League First Division, has called for a stand against North American recruiters after what he regarded as an attempt to sign his club's star forward, Frank Worthington.

Greaves said Dallas Tornado of the North American Soccer League made a bid for Worthington through the player's agent.

Worthington, whose contract expires at the end of the season, has admitted he would like to play in the United States.

But Greaves, angry that the approach was not made through the club, said: "There is no way Frank is leaving Bolton for America or anywhere else."

Meanwhile, Washington Diplomats of the NASL stepped up their bid to sign an even bigger name, European footballer of the year Kevin Keegan, the current England captain.

Keegan, who plays for West German club Hamburg SV, has been told by manager Gunter Netzer to make up his mind by the end of the season whether or not he wishes to stay with Hamburg.

Washington's offer to Keegan is believed to be worth more than $1 million a year.

Top Tennis-Tour Stars Just Ignore a Rookie

We're a long way from having a queen, of course, but Canada's princess of the tennis world has already created a royal sensation or two.

As a New Year approached and we talked, Victoria's Wendy Barlow glanced back at the thrills of 1978 on the courts of many countries and said, though she still clings to her dream of one day being a tennis super-star, it's been tough.

"I had a very good year last year," she conceded, "but women's tennis is a hard life. It's lonely when you're by yourself and you're away from home 10 months of the year when you're only 16 or 17. I know my parents were uneasy about me going because most of the other women touring are older.

"It takes you a year of travelling to get used to all the time changes and it takes at least a year before the other players start recognizing you're there. Most of the better players just ignore you and after a while you start doubting your own talents.

"Most of my friends are a few years older than I am and they said it took them three years to settle in."

It's not that the big stars say rude things to the tennis newcomers, Wendy explained.

"They don't say anything, that's what it is. They just totally ignore you. Like, in the locker room they just stare at you as if to say 'are you the ball girl or what?' Actually I think they're just worried about all the young players coming up.

"But I'm through the hardest part now, trying to get in. I've got the respect of the other players so they don't just think of me as an easy match. So now I'm enjoying it."

And Wendy laughed as she remembered the last time she and I got together for a chat — a couple of years back — and she talked of that "far off dream" of playing at Wimbledon one day. Well, it wasn't that far off after all.

When she went to London last June, she knew she'd be playing in Junior Wimbledon. But, of course, that isn't the real thing. Then Wendy found she could try out in the qualifying round.

"I didn't expect anything so I was very relaxed and went out and beat a girl who was ranked much higher than I was, 6-2, 6-1."

Then, in the last of her three qualifying matches, she had to face the world's top junior player, Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia.

"No one had ever beaten her, no junior in the world," Wendy said, remembering. "And all my friends said 'Oh well, have a good match' but I was relaxed, knew how Hana played and just managed to put everything together when I needed it."

Wendy shocked the tennis world with a 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 win in that match and, though she went out in the first round of Wimbledon proper to the very experienced Aussie player Helen Cawley, she shot up in rankings (she was 11th in the world when her time ran out as a junior on New Year's Day and around 150th among the world's women players) and showed she was serious and there to stay.

More successes came for Wendy during the summer and fall although the Claremont High School grad, who left Wednesday for Brigham Young University near Salt Lake City where she and sister Laurie are on the tennis team, was disappointed in Canada's loss to New Zealand in a close Federation Cup decision in Australia.

She was also concerned about the attack of tendonitis in her right wrist that forced her out of a junior tourney in Mexico and brought her home for the New Year.

Wendy has been resting her wrist so she'll be ready for qualifying round matches in the Avon Futures satellite circuit on Jan.16.

It's all quite hectic, she admitted. But what about the glamor of being a touring tennis pro?

"Well, I haven't seen much glamor," she said with a smile. "There are dances and dinner parties with the big events but I'm not much of a party-goer. I'm happy playing tennis."

And what about romance between the racquets?

"The men's and women's circuits are separate except for Wimbledon and Forest Hills and you're playing all the time so it's hard to meet guys," said Wendy, who added that she's only 18 and doesn't want to get involved yet, anyway.

"Most of the guys just care about their tennis," she said grinning, "and if they want a girlfriend . . . they don't want a tennis player!"

Australian Driver Hurt

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Australian driver Andrew Miedecke broke both legs in a crash on the Pukekohe circuit Thursday while practising for Saturday's International Grand Prix.

Firemen worked for 10 minutes to cut Miedecke from the wreckage of his Galloway car.

North Battling South In Two All-Star Games

While it won't be as big as the Civil War in the United States, the North will face the South in two South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League annual All-Star games.

The games are scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday at Lake Cowichan Arena and 8:15 p.m. Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Included on the South squad will be representatives from Juan de Fuca Gulls, Esquimalt Legion, Saanich Braves and Oak Bay Trios while the North team will be composed of players from Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking, Fuller Lake Flyers and Kerry Park Islanders.

Meanwhile, in league play Wednesday, Brett Malli fired four goals to lead Flyers to a come-from-behind 8-3 Patterson Division victory over Esquimalt Legion at Fuller Lake Arena.

Flyers, who trailed 2-1 after the first period, rallied to take a 3-2 lead into the third period and never looked back.

Don Bodger added two goals for Flyers and singles were contributed by Greg Hollett and Ken Bell.

Tom Turnbull (2) and Mark Ekstrom replied for Esquimalt.

Jim Lebitschnig had a relatively-easy time in the Fuller Lake goal with 29 saves while Ron Allan and Gord Draidye combined to make 44 stops for Legion.

Cutler, Loos Top Tech Parade

Newcomers Varick Cutler and Billy Loos are largely responsible for the good standing Victoria DataTech enjoys at the halfway point in their senior "A" men's basketball season.

DataTech has an 11-3 over-all record and is 4-0 in the Northwest International League — the best performance at this point since senior "A" basketball returned to Victoria seven years ago.

And the Victoria squad hopes to keep on the winning track while playing host to Brewster Packing in a pair of NIBL games at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday at Central Junior High School.

Cutler, a six-foot-eight centre from Buffalo, leads the team with 340 points for a 24.3 points-per-game average. His personal record also includes 157 defensive rebounds, 61 offensive rebounds and a shooting percentage of 56.3.

Loos, a six-foot-five former University of Victoria player, is second in scoring with 333 points with 86 defensive and 47 offensive rebounds.

Veteran Bob Burrows continues to perform well in a part-time capacity and is third in the scoring race with 176 points.

Jim Duddridge sets the club pace with a shooting percentage of 60.0, Chris Hall leads in assists with 64 and Brent Mullins leads in steals with 30 and has contributed 28 assists.

Dave Mulcahy and Mike Gains made the major contributions in rebounds with Mulcahy pulling in 91 and Gains grabbing 78.

DataTech managed 49 per cent from the field during its first 14 games and hit for 76 per cent from the free-throw line.

Individuals leading from the free-throw line were Dave Morgan (100%), Brian McKenzie (83%), Cutler (81%), Gains (81%) and Mullins (80%).

Several players, however, might be missing from the lineup this weekend.

Duddridge is definitely sidelined with an Achilles tendon problem, McKenzie is still nursing a knee problem and remains a doubtful starter and Mulcahy is down with the flu.

. . .'intolerable conduct'

NETS HOOP COACH FINED, SUSPENDED

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Loughery, coach of New Jersey Nets, was suspended Wednesday without pay for three games and fined $1,000 by National Basketball Association commissioner Lawrence O'Brien "for unsportsmanlike actions and demonstrative behavior" in last Friday night's game against Kansas City.

As a result, Loughery was banned from any activity relating to his team's games at Houston Wednesday night, New Orleans tonight and at home against San Antonio Friday night.

The actions by Loughery, which were confirmed by film and videotape of the game, included intentional physical contact with referees Don Murphy and Mike Mathis. In addition, he violated league rules by failing to go to his club's dressing room at half time, waiting instead to berate the officials, the league said.

"This type of conduct by an NBA coach is intolerable," O'Brien said in a telegram to Loughery. The commissioner also informed the coach that any further actions of that nature would result in more severe penalties.

Black Woman Gets Pro Post

COBHAM, England (AP) — Renee Powell, a 32-year-old American, has been named as golf pro at the exclusive Silvermere club. Powell, who has lived in London for three years, is the first black woman to hold such a position in Britain.

STEELERS, OILERS: NO HARD FEELINGS

A 'Love-Hit' Relationship

PITTSBURGH (AP) — They've been brothers in bruises, exchanging hards knocks with no hard feelings, ramming with respect, and even finding fraternity in fractures.

They are Houston Oilers and Pittsburgh Steelers, who take something of a love-hit relationship into Sunday's clash here for the American Football Conference title.

"You enjoy playing a team like Houston," said Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll. "It's football, purely good, hard football.

"Everything is settled right there on the field, and it makes it a very pleasant thing."

Pleasantries aside, there was that 1977 game in Houston in which Terry Bradshaw suffered a cracked wrist, backup Mike Kruzcek had his shoulder separated, and defensive back Tony Dungy wound up quarterbacking the Steelers in defeat.

Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini, knocked from that 1977 game with a severely sprained ankle, took another pounding when the teams met again this season in Houston.

Pastorini suffered three cracked ribs in that game. Rookie running back Earl Campbell of the Oilers suffered a cracked rib.

Houston also lost rookie wide receiver Mike Renfro for the season in that game with a knee injury.

Houston coach Bum Phillips called the contest "the most physical I've seen in 31 years of coaching."

Jerry Meins, the Oilers' trainer, called it "World War III."

Yet just as in previous encounters, there were no punches, no angry words, and no cheapshots.

They've been belting one another twice a year since they entered the AFC Central together in 1970. Yet they retain mutual respect.

"I think that's a tribute to the Pittsburgh organization and their coaching staff, as well as their players," Phillips said this week.

The teams split this season, the Oilers winning here and Pittsburgh winning in Houston. Over-all, Pittsburgh has a 13-5 edge in the series.

"There's no animosity but it's always very, very physical when we play Houston," said Pittsburgh defensive end L. C. Greenwood.

"They played hell out of us even when they didn't have a good record," said Pittsburgh's Joe Greene.

"We play hard football and dare the other team to do the same thing. The Oilers always accept the dare."

Bradshaw remembers that last game in Houston for the chivalry of the contact.

"I never played in as tough a game against a team I respected more," he said. "I played tough games that were full of fights, arguments and cheapshots. But Houston knocks your butt off, smiles, and tells you, great play."

Pittsburgh safety Don Shell, whose tackle helped fracture Campbell's rib in that game, later prayed on the sideline for Campbell's well being.

Some Steelers fans, not known for warmth toward Pittsburgh foes, have even sent the Oilers friendly mail.

That's a carryover from last season when a Houston victory over Cincinnati put Pittsburgh in the playoffs, a favor for which the Steelers sent each Houston coach and player an attache case for Christmas.

"I've gotten some real nice letters from their fans," Phillips said.

"They said they were hoping we'd get into the playoffs and play them a third time. They're gonna' root for Pittsburgh, but they wanted us to know they were pulling for us to get there."

Cindy, Ken Lead Bowlers

Mayfair Lanes supplied the leaders in both tenpin divisions during the first 11 weeks of the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

The 12th week of competition, following a two-week Christmas holiday break, started last Saturday and winners will be announced next week.

Open to all bowlers competing in league play on lanes in Greater Victoria, Sidney, Duncan, Chemainus, Lake Cowichan and Youbou, the contest runs for 26 weeks.

The bowler rolling the highest three-game scratch series in each of four divisions — men's and women's fivepins and men's and women's tenpins — is declared Bowler-of-the-Week. Each weekly winner receives a crest, has his or her accomplishment announced in the Times and qualifies for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs..

Both of the high tenpin series in the first 11 weeks were rolled at Mayfair Lanes.

Cindy Shaw set the pace for women with a 233-235-190 — 658 series during the eighth week of competition and Ken Buchanan topped the men's division with a red-hot 277-188-232 — 697 series during the second week.

The highlight was provided in the fourth week by Sheldon Nipp when he rolled a perfect 300 game on the way to a 640 series.

equal opportunities

With two seemingly equal advertising opportunities available, how would you decide which was to carry your sales messages?

We have a suggestion — take a few minutes to find out just how seemingly equal they really are.

Ask questions — how big is their circulation audience? Where do readers live? How much do they pay? And others.

Then ask for proof!

Ask to see a copy of their latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Equal opportunities? Be ABC-sure!

Soviets Keep World Title

KARLSTAD, Sweden (AP-Reuter) — The Soviet Union won its fourth consecutive world junior hockey title Wednesday with a 7-5 victory over Sweden in their final championship round match.

Czechoslovakia beat Finland 6-5 and edged ahead of Sweden in the final standings to claim second place.

Nikolai Varjanov and Viatcheslov Rjanov scored two minutes apart late in the third period to give the Soviet Union the win over Sweden. The Swedes, needing only a tie to clinch the title, had the score deadlocked 5-5 until Varjanov scored a lucky goal at 17:51.

Rjanov then scored an empty-net goal with 12 seconds to go after the Swedes had replaced their goaltender with an extra forward.

The Swedes' first defeat in the tournament left them third in the championship division behind Czechoslovakia. The Soviet Union had five points in the championship round, Czechoslovakia four and Sweden three. Finland was fourth with no points in three final-round games.

Canada, represented by New Westminster Bruins, finished fifth, followed by the United States, West Germany and Norway.

OHA Stars Capture Junior Tournament

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Ontario scored two goals early in the third period to snap a 1-1 tie and give the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League all-stars a 3-2 win over Quebec in the championship game of an international junior tournament Wednesday night.

Ontario wound up the tournament with a 4-3 record, while the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League all-stars were 3-4.

The Canadian Olympic white division team had a 3-0 record and Moscow Dynamo Riga finished at 2-1, although the Olympic team and the Soviets were ineligible for the title. The Western Hockey League all-stars had one win and five defeats.

Quebec defeated Ontario twice in round-robin play but the points did not count in determining the final winner as Wednesday's game was sudden-death.

Hilton...13 months ago

Hotelier Hilton Dies, 91

SANTA MONICA — Conrad Hilton, a general store owner's son who built one of the greatest hotel chains in the world, establishing outposts around the globe offering North American tourists the comforts of home, died Wednesday night at the age of 91.

Hilton, who was Zsa Zsa Gabor's second husband and Elizabeth Taylor's first father-in-law, died at 10 p.m. Wednesday, said a spokeswoman for St. John's hospital.

"He was admitted last Sunday for congestive heart failure," she said. A spokesman for Hilton gave the cause of death as pneumonia.

Hilton once traced his start in the hotel business to his boyhood before the turn of the century in San Antonio, N.M., when he guided stranded train passengers through the darkness to rent rooms at the large house of his father, a Norwegian immigrant — "the first Hilton hotel," he called it.

Emerging from first world war service, the young Hilton headed for the oil boom town of Cisco, Texas, in 1919, with $5,000 in savings pinned into the pocket of his suit and bought the town hotel.

On that modest foundation he built a chain that 50 years later boasted 188 Hiltons in 38 U.S. cities and 54 abroad.

They included some of the most prestigious names in U.S. hotels and a globe-dotting string of hostelries for well-heeled American tourists who wanted to experience foreign travel from a base with American style beds, rooms, food, service and amenities.

At one time or another, the Hilton group included the Waldorf Astoria and Plaza in New York, the Sir Francis Drake in San Francisco, the Mayflower in Washington, D.C., and the Palmer House in Chicago.

Hilton ran his empire with the help of his sons by his first wife, Mary Barron, whom he married in 1925 — Conrad Nicholson Jr. or "Nicky", William Barron and Eric Michael.

Barron now becomes president of the Hilton Hotels Corp. Nicky who married the 17-year-old Elizabeth Taylor in 1950, when he was 23, a marriage that fell apart in seven months — died of a heart attack in 1969 at age 42.

Lee's Love Letters

NEW YORK — The woman seeking a $500,000 settlement for the six years she lived with actor Lee Marvin says love letters he wrote show she was considered a wife.

Although Michelle Triola Marvin and the Oscar-winning actor were never married, she legally changed her name while they lived together. He left her in 1970 and married his childhood sweetheart.

She wants to use the letters in court in California, where she is trying to get half the $1 million Marvin earned during those years. Defence lawyers are fighting to bar the letters.

Marvin has filed a counter-complaint claiming he provided $1 million worth of "companionship, counseling, entertainment and other services" during the six-year relationship.

The nine letters were written during a time Marvin, who won an Oscar for his performance as the drunken gunfighter in Cat Ballou, was away making a film.

"Baby you are mine," Marvin wrote in one note telling how much he missed her.

Admissibility of the letters has not been decided.

In one letter, the movie actor described an imaginary scene in which he tells a judge he would accept a life sentence with Ms. Marvin as penalty for "robbing a 33-year-old cradle."

In other letters, the now 54-year-old Marvin wrote:

—"I do however spend a lot of time thinking of you and with a lot of kindness."

—"Oh baby. I want so much for you, please."

"You lost your mittens? You naughty kitten! Then you shall have no pie."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Even in top-echelon circles, bids are sometimes made that defy explanation. Such was the case in today's deal which was played in a national championship event some years ago. The unbelievable bid that was made was a "pass."

North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass(!)	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

When North jumped to three notrump, South certainly had justification for thinking that a slam could be made. So he "cue-bid" West's heart suit. To justify North's pass is, of course, impossible. Presumably his attention was wandering at the time, or the "Pass" was a slip of the tongue. So there was South playing a four-heart contract with a void in hearts. The result was surprising.

After West had opened a low trump and dummy won the trick with the jack, everybody (except South) enjoyed a hearty laugh when South discarded a spade. A low club was led off dummy, East followed suit with the five, and South's singleton queen won the trick.

Declarer next led a diamond to the board's queen, after which a diamond was returned to South's ace. The king of diamonds was then led and West, not knowing that his partner had no more diamonds, chose to trump this trick. Instead of overruffing in dummy, declarer discarded one of dummy's two spades.

This discard from dummy evidently gave West the curious idea that it was important to draw trumps. Hence West now led the ace and another trump! The trick was won with dummy's queen, and the king of trumps then picked up the defenders' trumps (on each of the four trump leads South had discarded spades from his own hand). A spade was next led to South's ace, and the rest of the tricks belonged to declarer since he had nothing but high diamonds remaining in his hand.

So declarer ended up making 11 tricks — and if hadn't seen it myself, I wouldn't believe it.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A commercial fisherman was fined a total of $200 in provincial court Wednesday when he pleaded guilty to two charges under the B.C. General Fisheries Regulations.

Gordon Patterson of 932 Rankin was charged on Dec. 13 after being checked by a sports fishermen patrol off Clover Point.

The charges were using multiple lines on a downrigger and using power gurdies.

A third charge of using a commercial troller without first removing fishing lines from commercial gear was dropped by the fisheries department.

The patrol on the same day also laid three charges against Shet Hung Mah of 1105 Cortez Place who was fishing for abalone at the Ogden Point breakwater.

He was fined a total of $225 after pleading guilty to having under-sized and over-the-limit abalone caught in a restricted area.

A nurse who admitted having a drinking problem was fined $50 and given one year's probation, which could include alcohol counselling, after pleading guilty to theft.

The court was told Dorothy Nicholas, 30, of 2136 Thomas, was seen stealing $22.35 worth of hair combs from a department store Dec. 22. She said she had no recollection of the event as she had been drinking.

A 17-year-old Black Creek man was fined a total of $150 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana and MDA.

Roderick Hayes was charged following a Dec. 2 police investigation at a downtown hotel.

These drivers pleaded guilty to drinking-driving charges:

Manuel Perdigao, 42, of 1304 Finlayson, fined $250; Genevieve Haftner, 46, of 1816 Crescent, fined $100 and given 50 hours of community work; Kenneth Lax, 27, of 1611 Admirals, fined $250; Wayne Young, 25, of 866 Craigflower, fined $350; Wilfred Dick, 19, of 1812 Jade Place, fined $300; Kenneth Morrison, 51, of Lazo, B.C., fined $300; Peter Kugel, 40, of 1412 Walnut, fined $300; John Hopkins, 18, of 5063 Catalina, fined $250.

Doctor, Wife Fined $200 After Admitting Smuggling

An Oak Bay doctor and his wife were fined $200 each Wednesday in provincial court after pleading guilty to unrelated charges under the Customs Act in connection with the smuggling of football equipment and the possession of a car unlawfully imported into the country.

Elizabeth Sinclare of 2737 Satellite was charged after a July 2 investigation by customs officials at the Douglas border crossing.

The court was told Mrs. Sinclare had declared about $40 worth of goods but a subsequent search of her Mercedes Benz revealed goods worth more than $1,000.

While some of the undeclared items included personal effects and alcohol, most were sports equipment destined for use by the Oak Bay Invaders football team which her husband manages.

Judge Frederick Giles questioned federal prosecutor S.D. Frankel's desire to seek only a minimum fine for the offence which he pointed out was not a good example for the young people who were to get the football equipment.

Frankel said he asked the minimum because total value of the goods siezed was less than $1,500, nor was the smuggling attempt part of a commercial operation.

The court was told Dr. Ross Sinclare had in his possession between July, 1976, and Aug. 2, 1978, a Bugatti replica automobile bearing licence plates for a 1964 Volkswagen registered to Sinclare.

Defence counsel Michael Hutchison said the $3,500 automobile had been subsequently seized and forfeited to the Crown.

Hutchison said his client, who had purchased the car at a classic car auction in San Francisco, thought the car was exempt from duty as it was more than 25 years old. It was only later he learned that most of its parts were more recent.

Gun Dealers Starting to Get Message

B.C. gun dealers are beginning to heed a new li o heed a new licensing requirement that came into effect New Year's Day.

Lorne Newson, chief firearms control officer for the province, said Wednesday about 250 dealers have now obtained licences as required under the federal gun control legislation.

That still leaves an estimated 1,750 yet to apply.

Newson said he doubted if there are any dealers in Victoria and Vancouver who have failed to get a licence. Most of the problems are with dealers in out-of-the-way places in northern and central B.C.

Under the legislation, anyone who buys and sells firearms and ammunition of any kind must be licensed. Previously only dealers selling restricted weapons such as handguns and semi-automatice rifles, bad to be licenced with the federal government.

Up to Christmas less than 100 of the dealers had applied.

Newson said ea[illegible] mail is bringing great ba[illegible]hes of applications.

He said dealers who applied before Dec. 31 and who have already paid the licence fee will be considered licenced.

Too Many Cooks? No

The whole gang can get into the act when you cook up this pizza

There's nothing like a homemade pizza, its golden brown crust topped with Mozzarella cheese, tomato sauce, spicy herbs and all the extras to make mouths water.

In fact, almost a much fun as eating pizza is having a hand in its making. Whether at an after-the-game get-together or a dinner party, pizza lovers everywhere will unite in this delicious effort.

It works like this: Each person invited brings his or her favorite ingredient — sausage, onions, mushrooms, anchovies, black olives — the list is endless. Then all the guests join in the fun. One person is put in charge of browning the meat while another prepares the crust. The next person can chop onions and everyone gets into the act.

SUPER PIZZA

Crust:

¾ cup warm water
1 envelope (7.5 g) active dry yeast
2¼ cups sifted all purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons cooking oil

Topping:

1½ cups pizza sauce
½ pound thinly sliced pepperoni
½ cup chopped onions
1 can (10 oz.) mushroom pieces
1 cup grated Mozzarella cheese
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon fennel seed
½ teaspoon rosemary

In small bowl, sprinkle yeast over warm water; let stand 10 min. Stir with fork; add salt and oil. In mixing boil, stir yest mixture into flour; mix well to form a dough. On floured board knead, for 5 minutes until elastic and pliable. Cover and set aside 15 min. Lightly grease grill and fingers; shape and pat dough evenly from centre to sides of griddle. Turn control to 190 deg. C (375 deg. F); bake 5-7 minutes until lightly browned. Turn crust; spread with pizza sauce. Add pepperoni, onions, mushroom and Mozzarella cheese; mix Parmesan cheese with seasonings and sprinkle on top. Bake about 8-10 min. or until cheese is melted and bubbly. Remove pizza to cutting board before dividing with pizza cutter into serving size pieces, or cut with scissors eight on the frill.

Sing the Praises of Cheese —Delicious, Nutritious, Cheap

Food for Thought

By Dr. Jean Mayer
And Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Whenever possible, we like to sing the praises of a food that's both delicious and nutritious. One of these — and low in cost as well — is cheese. Apparently, many people agree; government statistics show that cheese consumption has doubled since 1960, from eight pounds per person to 16.

Cheese is one of mankind's oldest and most valuable foods. It probably wasn't too many years after the first milk-giving animal was domesticated that someone's milk supply got left out long enough under the right coniditions for cheese to develop. Some curious or hungry farmer tasted it. The cheese-making industry was on its way.

Today, there are hundreds of cheeses from every part of the world. Many of them are the consequence of a lucky accident. Legend has it that an Alpine shepherd, leaving his lunch behind to rush his flock to safety from marauders, returned a few days later to find his cheese streaked with blue mold. He bravely tasted it. Thus blue cheese was born.

There seems to be at least one cheese for every taste and every occasion; there's creamy, fresh, low-fat cottage cheese and fat-rich, sharp, year-old Cheddar; bland, buttery Muenster and Brie; tangy Feta, and grating cheeses like old Romano, so concentrated you can eat only the smallest bite.

Most of our familiar cheeses are made from cows' milk, but goats, sheep — indeed, every animal that provides milk for human beings, including yaks — has supplied someone's table with cheese.

Like the milk it's made from, cheese is a good source of high-quality protein. An ounce of cream cheese supplies only two grams, whereas an ounce of Parmesan supplies 10. The majority of cheeses average between five and seven grams of protein per ounce, so you can figure that a one-ounce slice will provide about 15 per cent of the recommended daily amount of protein for adults and children over four years old.

Again like milk, cheese is a fine source of calcium; in fact, a major source in the North American diet. It is the calcium content that influences the texture of cheeses. In some soft cheeses such as cream cheese, it provides only two per cent of the U.S. RDA (Recommended Daily Allowance); in harder cheeses such as Parmesan, it provides 30 per cent. For cheeses like Edam, mozzarella and Swiss, you can estimate between 15 and 25 per cent of the U.S. RDA per ounce.

This is particularly important to people who suffer from lactose deficiency. Lactose, the chief carbohydrate in milk, is drained off in the whey. The small amount that stays in the churd in ripened cheeses is transformed to digestable lactic acid in two or three weeks of ripening. Since lactose is fequently added to the creamy mixture, however, it may be higher in cream and cottage cheeses.

Cheese also retains the vitamin A of whole milk — two to four percent of the U.S. RDA — but substantial amounts of the water-soluble B vitamins — thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, B6, biotin, and pantothenic and folic acids — become lost in the whey. Soft and semi-soft cheeses, like Monterey Jack and Cheddar, have higher concentrations than hard types, since these vitamins are synthesized by action of microorganisms in the ripening cheese. An ounce of Cheddar provides about six percent of the recommended daily allowance for riboflavin.

Depending on the fat content of the milk they were made from, most cheeses are relatively high in fat content, which adds a powerhouse of calories while contributing to the aroma and flavor. An ounce of Swiss provides eight grams of protein and 100 calories. By contrast, an ounce of codfish, which also contains eight grams of high quality protein, contributes only half the calories.

What's the difference? It's the eight grams of fat calories in the cheese as opposed to the one and a half grams of fat in the fish. Moreover, much of the fat in cheese is saturated, and most cheeses contain small amounts of cholesterol.

So, while we advise you to enjoy cheese, we also suggest you shouldn't gobble it by the pound.

Use More Than Eyes When Buying Meat

TORONTO (CP) — Too many persons buy meat with their eyes instead of their brains, says a butcher of 33 years.

Arthur Buck 58, made the comment when consulted recently about a consumers' guide to meat purchases and preparation.

He said shoppers should pick the cut they want, keeping in mind how they are going to cook it and how many servings per pound are needed.

Buck said that if the price of a particular cut of meat seems outrageous, shoppers should not buy it.

"Do you know why beef tenderloin is $7 a pound now?" he asked. "Because people will pay that price."

For his money, sirloin steak is the best steak buy.

"It has more meat and less bone, giving you more servings, and it's tender."

Buck said the tastiest, tenderest beef roast is a prime rib. It also can be cut into steaks.

Buying inexpensive cuts of meat is not a saving if someone ruins it by cooking it the wrong way, he said.

Buck, who also teaches retail meat cutting at George Brown College in Toronto, said that he tells students in his class that if they want to be the best cook on the street, they should dust off their cookbooks and use them.

"The second most unused book next to the Bible is a cookbook."

Buck said shoppers should get to know their butcher at the store where they regularly shop. Butchers will cut special orders for customers and will grind blade roasts up into hamburger, he said.

Butchers might charge 10 cents a pound for the service but it probably still will be cheaper than buying a package already ground.

On the subject of poultry Buck said fresh turkeys are superior to frozen ones in terms of flavor but the danger of salmonella contamination is less with the frozen.

He said self-basting turkeys are "an insult to the intelligence of the Canadian housewife."

"If you pay 10 cents a pound more for a basted bird, that's $2 extra for a 20-pound turkey," Buck said. "It's cheaper to take a whole pound of butter and put it on the top."

He said the best chicken to buy for roasting is a capon because it is meatier and has more flavor.

"Those little three- and four-pound chickens are force-fed," Buck said. "The only flavor you get is what you put on it."

With a growing ethnic population, heart, kidney and tongue have become more available and more popular although many people still turn their noses up at them for no good reason, Buck said.

"They're a good buy because they're solid meat. Lamb, veal and calf hearts, boiled then stuffed with bread or rice and baked, are very tender and delicious."

All About that Curious Delicacy, the Savoury

craig claiborne

There are a few curious institutions in the world of food that stick in the mind like ineradicable wine stains on cloth. One of them is the traditional British custom of serving savouries, to use the English spelling.

Now a savoury, in case you didn't know, is a nonsweet tidbit or an assortment of such tidbits that are served after the dessert, something like an appetizer that the chef forgot to serve at the beginning of the meal, then, deciding not to waste a good thing, passed it around at the end of the affair.

The list of foods that serious authors list as suitable to serve as savouries is almost as fascinating as the custom itself. Angels on horseback seem to be one of the most popular of these foods. These are, of course, oysters wrapped in bacon, skewered and broiled or baked in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp.

Odder perhaps, and less well known in America, are devils on horseback. These are made by stuffing pitted prunes with bits of chutney. The prunes are then wrapped in bacon, placed on buttered bread rounds, sprinkled with grated Paresman and baked in a hot oven or broiled before serving.

Many cheese concoctions are proper and considered choice. A few of them are Welsh rabbit and golden buck (another version of Welsh rabbit made with dark beer) plus one of the great simple creations, deep-fried camembert balls. Or you could serve small ramekins of hot, melted cheese. Devilled fish roe is highly acceptable.

When French chefs once worked in the homes of wealthy Londoners, the savouries would often take on the form of devilled beef bones, devilled chicken, well-spiced skewered foods and profiteroles or small cream puffs filled with cheese.

In case you're wondering about the logic of serving savouries, they were (and as far as I know still are) destined to "cleanse the palate" of the sweet before retiring to the drawing room of wherever to sip Port, Madeira and so on, or liqueurs.

There are those who complained that in some cases the savouries had the effect of rekindling the appetite.

For one who cares seriously about gastronomic lore, the origins of food names are endlessly amusing. One such savant is our long-time correspondent, Henry E. Funk (for a long time I thought he must be one of the word merchants like the Funk in Funk and Wagnall's, but he isn't).

Not long ago a letter arrived from Henry in which he discoursed on the origin of the name Veronique which he applied to so many dishes throughout the world where French cuisine is practiced. Veronique on any menu indicates, of course, a dish (generally fish) garnished with white grapes and generally in a white wine sauce.

"I am happy to tell you," he states, that "in her biography of her husband, Madame Cesar Ritz (Cesar Ritz, Host to the World, Lippincott Co., Philadelphia, 1938) notes that Filets de sole Veronique was among Escoffier's creations at the Carlton Hotel," in London.

Mme. Ritz recalled, in fact, the supper party for which the dish was created.

It was when a hostess named Lady de Gray brought the entire cast of the play Veronique to supper at the hotel's majestic dining room.

Henry, a sort of supersleuth among files, notes that while the Carlton opened in London in mid-July, 1899, the opera or operetta known as Veronique opened on May 5, 1903. The play, he adds, received favorable notices according to Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians, but it closed before the end of May. Thus, he deduces, and no doubt rightly so, that the coinage of Veronique as a dish with grapes occurred within the month of May nearly seventy-five years ago.

Sticky subjects: Stickers won't come off your bumper? Try a little paint remover; it dissolves stubborn adhesives. For plastics, try rubbing vegetable oil into stuck paper. Rubbing alcohol or the crepe sole of a shoe over price tags on glassware and metal usually removes the tag. But scratching, even with your fingernail, can dig into the surface of what's underneath the sticky paper.

Take time to explain your seeing needs to the optometrist. He won't know the precise placement of the two or three different prescriptions without bifocal or trifocal lenses. The traditional placement of the near prescription on the bottom and distance on the top may not be for you. You may need the near set high and wide for wear on the job. If you make a mistake, it could be costly to replace the lenses.

I'm another secretary who has trouble with telephone wise guys.

One man called my boss and, when I aked who was calling, he said, "Tell him Graig Nettles is on the line." So I told my boss that Graig Nettles was on the line. How did I know Graig Nettles was some big-shot Yankee ballplayer? So someone made a fool of me.

I'm instructed to ask who is calling and, if my boss doesn't want to talk to him, I say, "Sorry, he's tied up in a meeting. May he return your call?" Then the boss returns the call if and when he feels like it.

Most people are on to that dodge. They say, "I want to ask him just one question" or "Tell him I'll be over in 15 minutes."

If it is on the up-and-up, how do I go about finding a legitimate hypnotist? Thank you.

DEAR NEEDS: Where there is a dollar to be made, you'll find as many phonies as legitimate operators, and hypnosis is no exception.

Hypnosis has been effectively used instead of drugs to eliminate pain in childbirth, surgery and dental work. Under hypnosis people have overcome phobias and bad habits such as nail-biting, smoking and compulsive overeating. However, I must state here that not everyone is an ideal subject for hypnotism.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married three years. (No kids.) We lived together for two years before we made it legal, so we're not exactly strangers, right?

I thought we had a pretty solid marriage. My only complaint was that our sex life seemed to be going downhill. (He was always too tired.)

My mother, who lives 400 mils away, phoned to say that my father had suddenly become very ill, so I went to be with her for a week. On returning home I found a pair of earrings for pierced ears on the nightstand beside our bed.

I showed them to my husband and demanded an explanation. He swore he had never seen them before, and said he had no idea how they got there. What should I do?

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked how to cure bad breath. Everyone knows that regularly brushing the teeth, flossing and gargling with mouthwash are standard procedues, but I wonder how many have heard of brushing the tongue?

Dental microbiologists have known for years that bad breath can be caused by bacteria which accumulate on the tongue. Therefore, unless the tongue is cleaned regularly, the usual oral hygiene procedures are virtually useless.

In many cultures it is standard procedue to brush the tongue as well as the teeth. During my college days I had a Chinese roommate who gently scraped his tongue every morning with a special tool that looked like a cheese slicer.

DEAR T.C.B.: Thanks to you and the many others who wrote to tell me about the tongue-brushing technique. One generous reader even sent me a silver tongue scraper.

Truth About Mushrooms

QUESTION: I read somewhere that mushrooms are high in protein and low in calories. Is this true?

ANSWER: No, it is not! Four large or 10 small mushrooms (3½ oz.) contain less protein than a ½ oz. portion of meat. That is hardly enough to be seriously considered as a source of protein. On the plus side, they are low in calories (unless you saute them in butter), and they do complement the flavor of many foods.

QUESTION: Is farmer's cheese lower in calories than other cheeses? I am counting calories and I love cheese but it contains so many calories and I am looking for a low calorie cheese.

ANSWER: Farmer's cheese in the United States is made by pressing cottage cheese. Cottage cheese is very low in fat and therefore very low in calories. For instance, 1 oz. of cheddar cheese contains 112 calories, whereas 1 oz. of creamed cottage cheese contains only 30 calories. Canadian Farmer's cheese is produced like a brick cheese and contains approximately 93 calories per oz. The skim milk cheeses contain considerably less calories, only 55 calories per oz. Your best bet is the skim milk cheeses on the market.

Styles from Sexy to Starchy

Mary McFadden dress: Beyond trendy

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

NEW YORK — Don't anyone complain that all clothes look alike. Not after the spring styles being shown on Seventh Avenue hit the stores in a few months. The choices run from sexy to starchy. For women who are tired of keeping their shapes under wraps, there is ample opportunity to show off legs, waistlines and virtually every other part of the anatomy with licence from the best designers. For women who want to retain the ease and freedom of clothes of the past few years, there is also equal opportunity.

Some clothes are insipid and some inspired, and the news is there are more of the latter.

Perhaps propelled by the laissez-faire attitude, some designers have pulled themselves together and worked at a fevered pitch to produce clothes that express themselves completely. Take Mary McFadden, for example. She has perfected her own highly personal, somewhat exotic approach to fashion, which is astonishing since she has only been involved in the clothes game for about four years. Before that, her interest was art, which has contributed considerably to her approach to clothes.

Her dresses are severe and beyond the trendy. The spring collection utilizes the unusual prints, both primitive and sophisticated, crystal-pleated techniques and narrow, loose shapes that she has worked with from the beginning.

She hasn't changed her tune. She has simply refined her craft. A McFadden dress stands somewhat outside fashion, lending itself to different effects on different women. Sometimes her printed tunic tops are knotted at the hem. Sometimes they are wrapped at the waist or strung with barbaric jewelry. Coats are either as simple as a length of mohair with gold braid edges or made of pleated sheer material or quilted. Trousers, under the tunics or coats, are knotted at the ankles or simple narrow tubes.

The prints themselves are abstract splashes, derived from ancient manuscripts or details from a painting.

The results are clothes of splendor, which left many of the women in the audience at her Hotel Plaza showing gasping, "It's so beautiful." Some said they were moved to tears. Grandeur can do that to a person.

Weak Hearts Aren't Inevitable: Study

LONDON (UPI) — A research team operating in South Africa has produced additional proof that heart trouble is not a natural companion of old age.

The doctors found a village in the western Transvaal where the arteries of elderly blacks are as young as the arteries of white adolescents.

A village of the Tswana tribe, even one only 100 miles from metropolitan Johannesburg, may not seem relevant to heart-attack prone Europeans or North Americans. But, as someone once observed, it takes only one black sheep to prove all sheep aren't white.

In other words, the fact that there is a rural African lifestyle that produces old men with young arteries instead of, as is too often the case elsewhere, young men with old arteries, means it is possible for others to do the same. It is with this in mind that the South African Institute for Medical Research has been studying the Tswanas.

In a report to the British Medical Journal, two members of the institute, A. R. P. Walker and B. F. Walker, reported on what they found in their studies of the children and adults of the village.

The most striking finding was the absence of coronary heart disease (CHD) among the elderly. Allied to this was evidence the proportion of the apparently-protective high-density lipoproteins (HDL) in the blood did not fall from youth to age as it does among whites.

"Rural South African blacks live on a diet high in fibre and low in animal protein and fat," they reported. "Children are active and adults remain active even when old. These high values of HDL may well be representative for a population that is active, used to a frugal traditional diet, and free from CHD."

The researchers stressed that activity was built into the Tswana routine. Children had to walk 4 to 8 miles to school but attendance at school was excellent. They ran a good deal at play and were formidable competitors at races. Only seven of 98 elderly men in one sample smoked.

The diet was based primarily on cereals, principally corn, with legumes, vegetables, fruits and wild greens. They ingested significant quantities of meat and milk only infrequently. They derived only 13 percent of their energy from fats and only one-third of that was fat of animal origin.

There was a high fiber intake by both adults and children. Cautioning that the relationship between HDL and CHD must not be viewed with "excessive euphoria", the Walkers said their research lent "additional force to the repeated recommendation that preventive action against CHD should begin early in youth."

your health

My mother has high blood pressure. I'm thinking of buying her a machine so she can take her own pressure every day. I understand that most doctors don't approve of this. What could be wrong with such a precaution? — Mr. W.N.

Dear Mr. N.:

At first glance, any self-measuring device for blood pressure sounds as if it might be an excellent precautionary procedure. However, there are few advantages and distinct disadvantages to this practice.

The one advantage is that it does make people with high blood pressure more aware of the fact that they have a problem that cannot be treated casually.

The great disadvantage is a psychological one. Because of their anxiety, people who own such machines take their pressure so often as to become complusive about it. Then, having taken their pressure, they become complacent if the pressure is normal, and frequently do not continue with their prescribed drugs.

One of the greatest problems that doctors have to face is the discontinuance by patients of the use of the anti-hypertension drugs that have been prescribed for them.

If, on the other hand, the blood pressue reading becomes unusually high, many patients are thrown into a psychological tailspin which may further elevate their pressure.

Numbers for both the systolic an the diastolic pressure are significant only to the doctor who is caring for the patient. There is much more to the interpretation of these readings than the layman can possibly understand.

For example, let us suppose that a doctor establishes a diagnosis of high blood pressure. He then sets out to determine the particular type of high blood pressure, or hypertension, that his patient is suffering from. Once this is determined, the doctor choses one of the many anti-hypertension drugs that are now available. These are chosen with care and discrimination. Only by taking the blood pressue at regular intervals can that dosage be regulated and maintained. Did you know that in some instances doctors do not think it best to reduce the blood pressure level to that which the laity may consider to be "flat normal"? For this reason patients with high blood pressure need supervision, not curiosity.

Many people who are tempted to take their own blood pressure or have it taken in supermarkets, at airports and county fairs may satisfy that curiosity but the numbers themselves are no contribution to their sustained good health.

The greatest gift you can give your mother is to make sure that she sees her doctor regularly and continues to take the medication that is prescribed.

Personally, I feel these machines are but another factor that introduces fear and anxiety into a world in which they already flourish.

CN Profits Soaring Above $100M

MONTREAL (CP) - Canadian National Railways president Robert Bandeen says the company is beginning 1979 "in the best physical and financial health in its history."

In a statement Wednesday, Bandeen said CN's profits for 1978 will be well in excess of $100 million, up from $28 million a year ago.

CN earned an operating profit of $11.8 million in 1976, the first year in two decades that it turned a profit.

Bandeen said CN Rail's freight traffic in 1979 was expected to parallel predicted growth in the Canadian economy of slightly more than three per cent.

"The soft Canadian dollar will continue to stimulate the export business and global demand for basic products such as potash, coal, sulphur, lumber and newsprint is expected to remain high," Bandeen said.

"In addition, the recent OPEC announcement of a further increase in oil prices will accentuate the fuel-economy advantages of the rail mode."

The company's capital expenditures in 1979 will total $499 million. CN Rail will require $325 million, Bandeen said, most of this to be spent in western Canada.

However Bandeen said CN's outlook for 1979 was not entirely optimistic.

"Parliament currently is considering changes to the Transportation Act which could severely limit competitive activity in the Canadian transportation industry by dictating rate levels through long haul and short haul legislation and imposing new maximum and minimum limits," he noted.

"At a time when other countries are patterning the de-regulation of their rail networks after ours, the restrictive legislation embodied in Bill C-20 seems a backward step."

FARMERS GET 17% BOOST

OTTAWA (CP) — Prices paid farmers for all agricultural products measured by Statistics Canada, were 17 per cent higher in October than one year earlier.

The federal agency reports that its index for farm prices was 216.7 at the end of October. This means a statistically-devised package of farm products which was worth $100 in 1971 would have sold for $216.70 last October. The September index was 213.3.

Farm prices were highest in New Brunswick, where the index stood at 247.6 and lowest in British Columbia at 193.2.

Why King Dreaded A Kiss. . .

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Mackenzie King was a devoted fan of world figure skating champion, Barbara Ann Scott, but dreaded having to kiss her publicly in 1948.

King's meeting with and discussion about the skating star are recorded in great detail in the former prime minister's 1948 personal diaries for that year.

King appeared excited for several days about the prospects of meeting Miss Scott, whose career he claimed to have followed faithfully for 15 years.

On March 9, Miss Scott received a triumphant welcome in Ottawa, rivalled only by the reception for King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. King was at the railway station to greet his sports hero.

"I presented my cheek for the purposes required," King laments. "It was something I would have preferred to escape but there was no escaping the circumstances."

Later at a dinner honoring Miss Scott's victories at the Olympics and world skating championships, King lavished praise on her, saying she had given Canadians courage to face the Cold War.

King's desire to honor Miss Scott raised the ire of some of his colleagues.

King wanted both the Commons and Senate to publicly state congratulations and give gifts to Miss Scott. As well, King wanted a stamp designed in her honor.

Liberal MPs believed King was going too far, saying that many veterans of the Second World War had received no such honors although they sacrificed their lives for Canada. King then decided his own speeches would have to be enough.

The diaries also record that on July 23, 1948, while the nation was on pins and needles awaiting the results of the previous day's referendum on Newfoundland joining Confederation King was also wracked with indecision.

Not about Newfoundland but whether he should keep his newest pet terrier.

"The poor little doggie had misbehaved badly last night and I had to come to the conculsion this morning that he would have to be returned," King wrote.

But the 73-year-old King decided to keep the dog because it reminded him of his dear departed Pat I and Pat II, terriers whose memory he worshipped.

Newfoundland did enter King's thoughts that day, mainly because he was eager to become the last Father of Confederation by leading the nation as it embraced a new and possibly the last province.

On July 28, 1948, as King was preparing a formal speech on Newfoundland's entry into Confederation, he learned that Maurice Duplessis and his Union Nationale party were returned to power in a Quebec election.

King listed in his diary several of the reasons he believed contributed to the victory.

"Finally—and I think this, perhaps most important of all, the organizatinn tha Duplessis had built up, based on moneys derived from liquor license sources and the immense amount of money used by his government, his promises, patronage, etc.,—straight corruption."

King never appeared fond of provincial premiers.

George Drew of Ontario had racist tendencies, King believed. He considered Angus Macdonald of Nova Scotia as "not friendly to Ottawa," J. B. McNair of New Brunswick as "a difficult man" and Prince Edward Island premier J. Walter Jones "a crazy man."

Sexual Tastes Of History Cited

TORONTO (UPC) — The sexual preferences of Socrates, Julius Caesar, Plato and various Biblical figures were brought out at the morals trial of the national gay liberation newspaper Body Politic Wednesday.

Prosecutor Jerome Wiley sought to establish that a December, 1977, article on interviews with three pedophiles was offensive to community standards. A minister, a newspaper columnist and a psychologist supported his argument.

At one point in the philosophical arguments on the newspaper's right to print an article on man-boy sexual relations, however, Wiley was moved to comment "this is getting a little heavy for me — I'm just a kid from the country."

Three staffers of Pink Triangle Press, publishers of the newspaper, are charged with using the mails for "immoral, indecent, or scurrilous" purposes.

Rev. Ken Campbell said God's injunction to Moses calling homosexuality an "abomination" was a moral constant while other biblical passages, such as the parable of the stoning of an adultress, were open to interpretation.

Campbell was founder of Renaissance Canada, which sponsored a Canadian tour by anti-gay activist Anita Bryant and led a campaign to have such books as The Diviner's and The Catcher in the Rye removed from public schools in Halton County.

Under cross-examination, Campbell told defence lawyer Clayton Ruby he would like to see a return to the Socratic method of teaching in public schools.

"So we owe a great debt to Socrates," Ruby said. "Socrates was a pedophiliac, was he not?"

Wiley, commenting the argument was "getting a little heavy for me," asked for recorded substantiation that Plato and Socrates had made love to young boys.

"There have been no allegations made about Plato," Provincial Court Judge Sydney Harris said.

Psychiatrist Watts Rowsell gave a brief history of homosexual practices in ancient Greece and Rome. "It has been stated of Julius Caesar that he was every woman's man and every man's woman," he said.

Rowsell testified also "the vast silent majority of people have some homosexual traits" and "the potential for homosexuality is present in every person."

Toronto Sun columnist Clare Hoy, who has written critical columns on the Body Politic article, was asked by Ruby about his use of such terms as "fags," "creatures" and "weirdos." Hoy said he had been criticised by his editors for use of the word "fag."

Called biased by Ruby, Hoy said he "never pretended to be anything else".

Que. Crown Undecided About Valence Appeal

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec justice department authorities have still not decided if they will appeal the jury acquittal of Claude Valence on four of five charges in the kidnapping of Charles Marion.

But a final decision may come "early next week," Pierre Verdon, chief Crown prosecutor for the Montreal district, said Wednesday.

On Tuesday, a jury of seven women and four men found Valence, 45, guilty of only one charge — attempted extortion against the credit union in Sherbrooke, Que., where Marion worked as loans manager until his abduction Aug. 6, 1977.

Valence, found not guilty of charges of kidnapping, conspiracy to kidnap, forcible detention and extortion against Marion, is to appear for sentencing today. The maximum term for attempted extortion is 14 years.

Still to face trial are Valence's alleged co-conspirators, Michel De Varenne, 36, and Rene Chalifoux, 52. Also facing charges is Louise Beaubien, 26.

Justice authorities also have to decide whether to reopen charges against Mrs. Jeanne Valence, 43, who earlier was being tried jointly with her husband. Charges against her were suspended two months into the trial.

At the time, the Crown remained silent about its reasons for the surprise move so it would not influence the jury. With the trial over, however, it became apparent that Mrs. Valence's testimony could have provided grounds for a separate trial for her husband.

This would have forced the prosecution to proceed against Mrs. Valence alone rather than her husband. However, Valence's conviction was the Crown's main goal and had his trial been delayed, he might have been able to win release on bail.

The grounds for a separate trial are in a clause of the Canada Evidence Act which says spouses cannot be forced to testify about their confidential discussions with each other.

Verdon said further study would be necessary before the Crown decided whether to bring Mrs. Valence to trial a second time.

Valence's lawyer, Jean-Pierre Rancourt, leaned heavily on the suggestion that Marion had a part in his own kidnapping, hoping to cash in on the $1-million ransom demand against his employers.

FORTUNATELY Big Al, a 136-kilogram alligator at the Toronto zoo is not hungry yet...which might explain why photographer moved in for a close-up. The 3-metre long reptile last ate in October and won't dine again until April or May. For now, he's content just to sun himself.

Exile Back Saturday

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Lanctot, wanted in connection with the 1970 kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross, will return to Canada Saturday with his wife and three children, Quebec provincial police said Wednesday.

Lanctot will be accompanied by two provincial police officers and arrive at Mirabel International Airport from Paris at about 12:30 p.m. EST, police said. Earlier, Lanctot's lawyer reported he would return Friday.

Lanctot has been in exile since December, 1970, when he, Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, Marc Carbonneau and Yves Langlois were flown to Cuba after Cross was released.

In 1974 the five members of a cell of the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec moved to Paris where they were granted residents' permits.

The Cossette-Trudels returned to Canada Dec. 13 and have since been charged with conspiracy to kidnap, kidnapping, forcible detention and extortion in connection with the Cross abduction. They have not entered a plea and are free on $100,000 bail pending further proceedings.

Lanctot, Mrs. Cossette-Trudel's brother, is expected to face similar charges.

During the exile a rift developed between Cossette-Trudels and the other three. Lanctot's faction steadfastly demanded a general amnesty for FLQ suspects, while the Cossette-Trudels decided to accept the Quebec government's position that all suspects would be prosecuted if they returned home.

There is no warrant outstanding for Suzanne Lanctot, Jacque's wife. Police said she was not involved in any of the incidents her husband will be charged in connection with.

Taillibert Facing Loss of Estate

MONTREAL (CP) — Roger Taillibert, architect of the 1976 Olympic installations, has until Feb. 15 to contest a federal court judgment ordering him to pay more than $3.5 million in income tax and interest or lose his country home near Montreal.

According to documents submitted by the federal tax department, Taillibert owes taxes of $2,936,105 on revenue he received in 1975, plus interest, for a total of $3,564,824.

A provisional judgment rendered here Wednesday stipulates that Taillibert, a resident of Paris, must contest the order by Feb. 15 or lose his home and property in St. Sauveur-des-Monts, north of Montreal.

FIRED CHIEF VOWS FIGHT

KITCHNER, Ont. (UPC) - Syd Brown, declaring "I became the victim," vowed to fight for his job Wednesday after the Waterloo Regional Police Commission fired him as chief of its 482 man force.

The Ontario Police Commission last summer recommended Brown's dismissal after it investigated charges of police brutality in a raid against a local motor cycle gang. Members of the gang charged police made unwarrranted use of police dogs in the raid.

The OPC charged Brown with ultimate responsibiltiy for police actions in the raid and said his philosophy and actions caused "certian sections of the force to become a law unto themselves".

Four other officers investigated by the commission were reduced in rank last night.

The dismissal was, "a kick in the teeth," Brown said after he emerged from a meeting with Stephen Harper, chairman of the regional commission.

Brown vowed to seek review of the firing and promised lawsuits against everyone connected.

"I feel disgusted with the whole affair, after hours and hours I put into make this a model police force," Brown said after losing his $42,000 a year job.

"I still think this is one of the best police forces in Canada. We did a lot of innovative things, but we were running against the grain of other forces ...police chiefs and the OPC," Brown said.

Appeal Court Upholds Corrections Act Ruling

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal Wednesday upheld a ruling that part of the province's Corrections Act is invalid.

The case was taken to the appeal court by the provincial government after the B.C. Supreme Court ruled part of the act was invalid because the provincial government lacked jurisdiction.

The legislation was aimed at fighting hard-core juvenile delinquency, but the supreme court ruled it went beyond the powers of the province.

The case involved a 16-year-old youth from Port Alberni who had been sentenced to a provincial containment facility. His lawyer argued the province did not have jurisdiction to hold the youth in such a facility, because it was a federal power under the Criminal Code.

That argument was upheld by both the supreme court and the appeal court.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said in Victoria that juvenile offenders are still being locked up.

"The youngsters are still being treated and cared for as conditions of probation and on remand," he told reporters.

He said the reasons for judgment are being studied by officials, and "I would like to assure everyone in the province that the programs are still operative — they are continuing as they have been since the decison taken by the Supreme Court."

He said youngsters are being admitted to Centre Creek at Chilliwack and to Lakeview Camp near Campbell River as a condition of probation and also into Willingdon in Vancouver and the Juvenile Detention Home in Victoria, primarily on remand prior to sentence.

"We are following the procedures that are available to us under the federal juvenile legislation and we are considering the reasons for judgment."

He said changes to the Corrections Act are being considered, and representations have been made to the federal government for amendments to the federal legislation.

b.c. briefs

More Wine, Less Liquor

The Liquor Distribution Branch (LDB) Wednesday dropped 38 products from its listings and added 45 new ones in recognition of a public shift in taste to white wines from hard liquors, a spokesman said.

Included in the new listings were 34 imported wines — 20 of them white wines, including eight moderately-priced California vintages, said Bob Wallace, LDB general manager.

The 34 new wines chosen also fill the gap created when low and moderately-priced imported wines rose in price because of the devalued Canadian dollar, he said.

The 38 products were delisted because they haven't sold well, he said, and will disappear from shelves as inventories run out. They include: Bamboo Leaf Green from China, Danish Mead, Japanese plum wine and Yugoslavian slivovitz, as well as some of the better but higher-priced wines and liqueurs.

Pay Hike Allowed

CASTLEGAR (CP) — An arbitration board has allowed 486 teachers in Castlegar, Trail and Grand Forks a salary increase of 7.6 per cent in 1979.

School district officials in Trail and Grand Forks said they had allowed for only a six-per-cent increase this year and would have to make some budget adjustments.

Boss to Prison

VANCOUVER (CP) — Heinz Walter Glazer, 36, president and principal owner of Professional Welding Consultants, was sentenced Wednesday to one year in jail and put on probation for a year after pleading guilty to theft of $136,000 from his company.

Prisoner Dead

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police were investigating the death of a prisoner from the Agassiz Mountain prison who had been out on a pass during the Christmas holiday period.

The body of the 24-year-old man was found Tuesday afternoon, covered with blood.

Police said there was no evidence of foul play, but they were waiting for a report from a toxicologist.

Cold Layoffs

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Five hundred plywood workers at the Canadian Forest Products Ltd. operation here have been laid off because of the cold weather.

A company spokesman said the plant had shut down for the Christmas holidays and operations could not resume because frost in the logs caused them to crack when cut.

The spokesman said operations will resume when the weather warms up.

Temperature in the Vancouver area was -6 degrees celsius Tuesday night.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

A Bean That's Not A Bean

Whether or not the Broad Bean is appreciated as a table delicacy, the plant itself is rather unusual in the realm of garden vegetables.

Although called a bean, it is not a bean, nor is it a member of the bean family.

It is a species of Vetch, one of the few that have no clinging tendrils.

Botanically it is Vicia faba. The name vicia comes from the Latin vincio, to bind, in reference to the clinging tendrils found on most of the vetches.

Faba, or fava, was once the genetic name for this plant which is still known in many areas as the Faba (or fava) Bean.

Unlike our other beans, Vicia faba is native to North Africa and southwestern Asia, where the perfume of a field of these vetches in flower is reputed to be something that is long remembered.

In some parts of the world the broad bean is known as the Horse Bean, grown solely as a forage crop.

Where the cost of the seed is but a few cents a pound the plant is considered the best of the vetches to grow as a cover crop and turn under in spring to improve the soil. The amount of growth made before flowering provides more humus and nutrients than other cover crops.

The broad bean is a cool weather crop. Sowings may be made from November (in sheltered gardens) until March. Mid-January to mid-February is a suitable period for sowing under glass cloches, in coldframes, or with some form of temporary protection in the open ground.

There are long-podded varieties obtainable with either white or green seeds, the broad-podded varieties in both tall and dwarf forms.

Windsor's are considered to have the best flavour and the green-seeded forms more tender and palatable than the white.

Any good garden soil suits them well, not highly enriched, or they will tend to make large plants with very few pods.

Seed can be sown in a double row with 10 inches between. The seed is sown three inches deep for winter sowings and spaced nine inches apart, staggering the seed in the two rows.

The pods should be gathered when well filled but with the seed still soft. If left too long the seed coats become tough and must be removed before serving.

The growing tips of the plants are cut off when the first pods have set at the base of the plants, or as soon as four sets of flowers have opened. This prevents an infestation of black fly which move from their winter host, the common thistle, to the beans for the juices in the tender tips.

A dusting of agricultural lime protects the plants from the pea and bean weevil which puts those pretty scalloped edges on the leaves.

219 Million Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States began 1979 with an estimated population of 219,874,966, the Census Bureau says.

That is an increase of more than 1.7 million over New Year's Day, 1978.

The Census Bureau estimates that the net gain was the result of 3.3 million births, 1.9 million deaths and net immigration of about 347,000.

The estimated population under age 18 is 62,929,000.

Few Accept PWA Crash Offer

CALGARY (CP) — Defendants in lawsuits arising from last February's jet air crash at Cranbrook, in which 43 persons died, are keeping their offer of interim expense payments open to victims of the crash, but to date few have taken advantage of the offer, a lawyer representing the defendants says.

In an interview, Eric Lane, organizer of a pool of defendants' insurers, said "anybody who needs help to tide them over, we'll help them out."

While lawyers for survivors and families of victims said most of their clients do not need the financial assistance offered, they said they appreciated the pool's efforts.

The crash, which occurred Feb. 11 as a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 attempted to abort a landing at the airport during a snowstorm, left six survivors.

Four of the defendants, Boeing Aircraft Corp. of Seattle, Wash., the Rohr Corp. of California, the City of Cranbrook and PWA, have put money into the pool's fund for settlements arising from the crash.

Rohr manufactured the thrust reversers on the aircraft engines. The thrust reversers act as a brake on the aircraft.

The ministry of transport, which operated communications at the airport, has agreed in principle to the pool arrangement but has been unable to put any money into it because of parliamentary tradition.

Terry Dalton, lawyer for Ron Sims of Calgary who lost both legs in the crash, said his client has been receiving generous interim payments from the pool.

"We indicated what the expenses were and we have received money," Dalton said. "It's been a big help."

Lane said Lloyd's, the London-based insurance market which would probably pay the bulk of the claims, "doesn't make war on widows."

"We're happy to lend money to any victim who needs it."

He said he approached all the survivors' and victims' estate lawyers with the offer to provide living expenses pending the outcome of the settlement negotiations and suits.

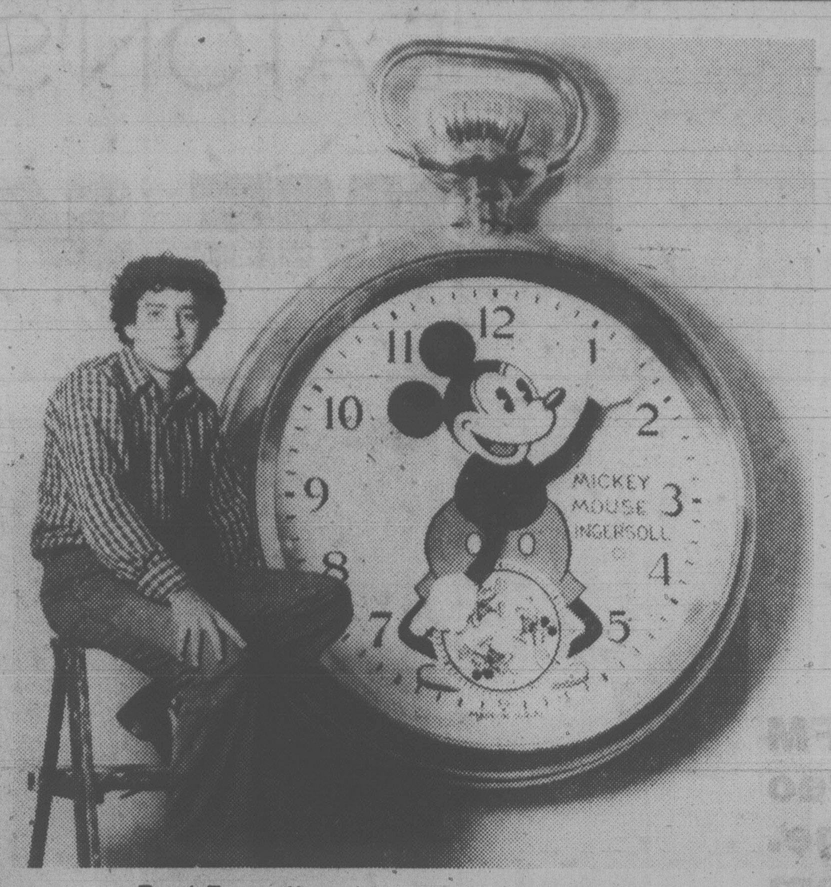
But he refused to talk about individual cases or say how many were receiving the interim payments.

Lawyer Ray Cooper of Creston said his client did not need to ask the pool for financial help, but already has reached a generous settlement with the group.

Cooper's client lost his wife, who held a full-time job and was the mother of two children.

Cooper said he settled with Lane for $100,000.

If he had not reached such a settlement, Cooper said he was considering following several other estate cases to California courts where air crash settlements have traditionally been much higher than in Canada.



Paul Persoff and his four-foot high friend

Persoff's Gigantic Watch No Mickey Mouse Effort

By RITA REIF
New York Times

NEW YORK — Mickey Mouse's time has come — literally, and in a big way. At the ripe age of 50, the rambunctious rodent has been celebrated by parties, several books and countless commercial copies of the cartoon character's classic toys and timepieces.

No wonder, then, that Mickey has grown — at least the pocket watch version. The familiar one-inch-high fellow that enlivens the face of the old Ingersolls is now four feet.

The time piece — its overall diameter is five feet — was devised two years ago by Paul Persoff, a 37-year-old clockmaker who is usually found on weekdays laboring on his plug-in designs in his Manhattan workshop. This month he was found some of the time at the Allan Stone Gallery here, where Mickey and a selection of Peroff's other giant watch-inspired clocks were the subject of a one-man show.

Persoff originally thought that he could produce a multiple edition of the Mickey Mouse clocks. That was before he had finished his first such design. "I estimated it would take me three weeks or so," he recalled. Instead, he labored over the 140-pound effort for a year and a half in what, so far, is an edition of one Mickey Mouse clock.

No, he explained, it wasn't the works that delayed him. The modified tower-clock movement, the mechanism that makes outdoor clocks that are three times the size of the Mickey clock function, was a cinch for this former motorcycle repairman to install. Nor was it the sound system — a booming tick tock. That proved easy to incorporate: the ticking comes from a tape recording concealed inside the clock's housing; it plays at the flick of a switch.

Even the fine workmanship of the wood housing posed no problems for Persoff, who has been making furniture for years. He delighted in adding a few untraditional touches: twist the winder, swivel the face, and these parts lift off. It makes the clock movable, if not exactly portable.

What really made Peroff overdue in delivering the elephantine watch was applying the finish on the case.

He had to construct a special room for spraying on all that shimmer, a finish that simulates the look of the nickel-plated original.

It is no surprise, then, that the price Persoff was paid for the Mickey Mouse timepiece two years ago — $10,000 — "is not relevant today," he said, explaining that materials have risen in cost and that the price did not include any profit for his work.

SAANICH DOUBLES ITS EXPECTATIONS

More in hope than expectation, Saanich will ask the provincial government for $644,000 as the provincial share of seven proposed road projects costing nearly $1.3 million.

The requested sum is more than double what Saanich received from the provincial ministry of highways under the roads cost-sharing program last year.

In 1978 the municipality applied for more than $500,000 but received $320,000.

"We were told that Saanich had a fair share of cost-sharing funds so it may not be possible to get a larger share for the next fiscal year," municipal engineer Clifford Warren told the public works committee Wednesday night.

Sewer Growth Meeting Set

A special meeting of Saanich council's public works committee has been scheduled for Jan. 30 to consider proposed boundary extensions to the municipality's sewer enterprise area.

Major sewer boundary realignments occur fairly infrequently in Saanich and when they do they're surrounded by controversy.

Residents who would like their properties sewered sometimes find themselves shut out on the other side of the frontier, and others who are included in sewer plans would rather not be.

All such points of view will be heard at the Jan. 30 meeting.

The proposed extension of the sewer enterprise area was to have been discussed at Wednesday night's meeting of the public works committee, and at least 20 residents turned up to have their say.

But committee chairman Ald. Fred Severson apologised, explaining that staff had tried to contact as many residents as possible to inform them that a special meeting would have to be devoted to the subject.

Municipal engineer Clifford Warren said in a report some of the specific areas suggested for sewer services include the Greenlea area adjacent to Royal Oak, the Hastings area and portions of Broadmead.

Some of the properties have been experiencing sanitation problems for several years, he said, and there have been requests for sewer services both from residents and the public health authorities.

Warren said the boundary changes would bring Saanich's supply of potential building lots to about 1,700, the equivalent of a three-year supply.

Nearly 500 building permits for single-family homes were taken out in 1978.

Prince to Tour

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince Fahd will soon tour several Arab states to bolster Arab solidarity, the daily newspaper Al Medina reported Monday.

Burst Pipes To Be Drained

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for Canron Ltd. said Wednesday that water which collected in the pipes supporting the massive glass roof of the provincial government's courthouse development, will be drained by drilling holes in the base of the pipes.

Several hundred workers at the project were evacuated Tuesday morning when cracks were noticed in several of the six-inch steel pipes.

Project manager Louis Van Blankenstein met Wednesday with officials of Canron, contractor for the prefabrication and erection of the roof truss section of the development.

He said that they had determined that the water that froze and burst the pipes collected during fabrication of the pipe or during erection of the structure.

Blankenstein said the structure was designed as a closed system and a rainstorm could not refill the pipes and repeat the problem during another cold spell.

Canron is continuing to investigate ways to repair the buckled pipes.

Work resumed Wednesday on the project after scaffolding was erected to support the weakened areas. The 5,300-square-foot roof is made up of 800 glass panes, each weighing 600 pounds and supported by a metal grid.

When the cracks were discovered, police cordoned off the area, but traffic was flowing normally Wednesday.

Project chairman Gordon Shrum said the situation is not a catastrophe, and the "only concern is that opening of the building may be delayed while the problem is rectified."

The building is expected to be ready for occupancy in July, with official opening set for Sept. 6.

Sex and Socialism DO Mix. . .

TOKYO (UPI) — A cry for sexual freedom appeared in Peking Wednesday in the form of a wall poster declaring love and sexual desire are classless and "as necessary as eating."

Japan's Kyodo News Service said in a dispatch from the Chinese capital that the poster, probably the first of its kind, was put up on the so-called "Democratic Wall."

The poster, entitled "a proposal for new living," branded the government's long-standing policy of sexual abstinence as a "cruel crime which destroys youths' mind and body."

"Sexual repression has increased the number of sex crimes and is detrimental to socialism and arts," the poster said.

It criticized the Peking government for opposing premarital sex as "antisocialistic."

Good Grief! Charlie Brown's 30

SHULZ
...bleak outlook

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In 1969, when the United States sent a manned spacecraft into orbit around the moon, the Apollo 10 mother ship was named after a comic-strip character named Charlie Brown and its lunar module after his dog Snoopy.

No one objected. Charlie Brown and Snoopy, the winsome heroes of Peanuts, were an institution.

And this week they celebrate the beginning of their comic strip's 30th year.

There has never been quite so extraordinary a group as the cast of Peanuts—Charlie Brown, the eternal loser; Linus, who spouts theology while cuddling his security blanket; Lucy, Linus's crabby sister; and Snoopy, the most sophisticated of hounds, who recently replaced the Van Gogh in his palatial dog house with an Andrew Wyeth.

But perhaps the most interesting and least known of the Peanuts characters is their creator, Charles Schulz, whose views on life are often bleak.

Schulz's earliest memories are of the great comic strips of his childhood and of his ambition to become a cartoonist. His only formal training was a correspondence course through a local drawing school, supplemented by years of practice and experimentation.

The result is Peanuts, which in every detail reflects some facet of Schulz's personality and life. Like Charlie Brown's, his father was a barber and Schulz once owned a rather eccentric dog.

And when you talk to Schulz it doesn't take long to realize that he is Charlie Brown, older and greyer of course, but still the bemused, worried kid on the block.

"I know what it is to have to spend days, evenings and weekends by myself," he says, "and I also know how uncomfortable anxiety can be. I worry about almost all there is in life to worry about, and because I worry, Charlie Brown has to worry."

Over the last 30 years—in which the strip has grown from a circulation of eight newspapers to 1,750 worldwide, with a daily following of 90 million readers—the Peanuts have struggled with the changing realities and values of modern life, changing as we have, but like most of us never quite sure of what it is all about.

"Charlie Brown suffers, because he is a caricature of the ordinary person," Schulz explains. "Most of us are much more acquainted with losing than we are with winning. Winning is great but it isn't funny. While one person is a happy winner, there may be a hundred losers using funny stories to console themselves."

For 30 years Schulz has lived daily with the strip, which he admits rarely leaves his mind. Some of his ideas are flashes of inspiration, others are years in the making.

"It's rather a mystery to me where some of the little phrases come from," he admits, "and why it is possible to think of 10 ideas in one day and not be able to think of a single one the next."

Airliner Not Out of Fuel?

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A lawyer for the United Air Lines captain whose jet crashed in Portland last week has disputed investigators' reports that the DC-8 ran out of fuel, saying the pilot chose a spot to crash land after the engines flamed out.

The statement by lawyer Albert Malanca was the first word of pilot Malburn McBroom's thoughts and actions in the final minutes before his jet crashed, killing 10 of 184 persons aboard.

Malanca spoke at a news conference after listening to a National Transportation Safety Board interview with his client Wednesday. Investigators interviewed McBroom for 75 minutes, indicating he did an "amazing job" in landing the jet, Malanca said.

Investigators say evidence shows the plane ran out of fuel, but Malanca said McBroom thought there was enough fuel to reach Portland International Airport.

"The captain was — and I believe all of the crew in the cockpit were — of the opinion there was sufficient fuel to make the airport," Malanca said.

He said that after the engines flamed out, pilot McBroom made a quick attempt to determine how best to set the plane down — rejecting a landing in the Columbia River or on a nearby freeway.

The plane crashed into a grove of large evergreen trees and wrecked two unoccupied houses in a residential area of Portland five kilometres from the airport. There were no injuries or deaths on the ground.

A tape recording of a radio conversation showed the 52-year-old pilot said just after 6:03 p.m. that he had 3,000 pounds of fuel. The plane crashed at 6:14 p.m. Pilots and federal investigators estimate 3,000 pounds of fuel would last from 10 to 15 minutes in a DC-8.

"He chose an unlighted area where he could see trees and felt there were no people," Malanca said. "Rather than try for one final burst of power to try to get the plane to the airport, McBroom choose to feather the plane down as gently as possible toward his chosen crash site."

Border Woes For Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — Serious trouble spots are developing along vast areas of the Soviet Union's non-European borders — more problems than the Russians have had to deal with at one time since the Second World War, Western diplomatic analysts say. Clearly, it has the Kremlin worried.

Turkey, Iran, Pakistan and Afghanistan all have known periods of turmoil before, but never have all been so unstable simultaneously.

Complicating the picture is China, which has a troubled 6,960-kilometre border with the Soviet Union and has just opened diplomatic relations with the United States.

It adds up to this: With the exception of Mongolia, Kremlin strategists are faced with uncertainty in every country that the U.S.S.R. borders from the Middle East to the Pacific.

In addition to developments in China, the Kremlin must consider that:

Iran has been wracked by rioting aimed at deposing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

In Turkey martial law has been declared after rioting in the eastern part of the country.

—In Afghanistan, the Soviet Union has become deeply involved in the survival of a fragile regime. And in Pakistan, deposed premier Zulfikar Ali Bhutto is appealing a death sentence which, if carried out, might split his nation.

The Peking regime capped a year of vigorous diplomatic activity by establishing relations with the United States.

Grumman Guilty

WASHINGTON (WP) — A former Grumman Corp. subsidiary pleaded guilty in federal court Wednesday to making false statements about more than $5 million in payments it made to foreign officials in connection with the sale of executive jet planes.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Gasch accepted a plea-bargaining agreement under which the company, now known as Gulfstream American Corp., will pay the maximum fine allowed, $10,000 on each of 12 counts.

Cuppa Cure-All

BOSTON (AP) — A cup of tea will help reduce a fatal complication of thalassemia, a blood disorder that strikes people of Italian and Greek ancestry, doctors report.

People with thalassemia cannot produce hemoglobin properly and must be treated with blood transfusions. However, this can lead to excessive levels of iron in the heart and other organs.

Doctors at the Upstate Medical Centre in Syracuse, N.Y., found that a cup of orange pekoe tea with dinner significantly reduces the amount of iron absorbed by the bodies of thalassemia patients.

LABOR HOLDING SLIGHT LEAD

LONDON (Reuter) — The governing Labor party is leading the opposition Conservatives by three percentage points, says the first public-opinion poll of 1979, the year in which a general election must be held.

The survey, published by The Dailt Mail, showed that 47.9 per cent of Britons would vote Labor and 41.7 per cent would support the Conservatives.

Support for the Liberal party, whose former leader Jeremy Thorpe is awaiting trial on charges of conspiring to murder a male model, slumped to 4.6 per cent. And 2.8 per cent said they would vote for other small parties.

PREMIER MEETS ON MACBLO BID

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Premier Bill Bennett was meeting today with the heads of MacMillan-Bloedel, Canadian Pacific Investments and Domtar Ltd., to determine how he can prevent a takeover of MacBlo.

The premier, who vowed to take "whatever action is necessary" to prevent a takeover of the company, scheduled separate meetings today with M-B president Calvert Knudsen, Domtar president Alex D. Hamilton and CPI chairman Ian D. Sinclair.

Bennett will detail the results of meetings at a news conference Friday, a spokesman in the premier's office said.

MacMillan-Bloedel, the nation's largest forest products company, and Domtar called off their bidding war for control of each other's shares last month. The Montreal-based CPI's offer for control of M-B was still open, however.

The bidding for control of MacMillan-Bloedel has been opposed not only by Bennett's government, but by the western province's powerful International Woodworkers of America.

Banks Boost Prime Rates

Times News Services

Canadian chartered banks today boosted their prime lending rates to 12 per cent from 11½ per cent, effective Friday, following an increase Wednesday in the Bank of Canada's bank rate to a record 11¼ per cent.

The prime rate is the rate at which chartered banks lend money to their most credit-worthy corporate customers.

At the same time, the banks also increased the interest rate on non-chequing accounts to 9½ per cent from nine per cent, retroactive to Jan. 1.

Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey said Wednesday the jump to 11¼ per cent from 10¾ was "in response to further substantial increases in U.S. interest rates and a related weakening of the foreign exchange value of the Canadian dollar" even though the dollar closed up 17-100 at $0.8413 U.S. on international markets.

In New York at noon today, the Canadian dollar was up 7-100 at $0.8420.

Technically, the bank rate is the rate at which the chartered banks borrow from the central bank, but such bank borrowings are insignificant. In practical terms, a rate change is a signal to the chartered banks to follow suit.

The Bank of Canada move means Victorians are going to have to pay more interest on bank loans and mortgages, starting almost immediately.

At this stage, however, nobody appears certain by how much.

While most Victoria banks contacted were still waiting to officially hear about the increase, a Bank of Montreal official said they had received notification that the increase goes into effect on Friday.

"It's certainly going to put everything up," a Royal Trust spokesman said. "It's going to cost more to do business. This will mean more expensive products. I'm afraid the public will end up paying for it."

A Westcoast Savings Credit Union spokesman said it is too soon for the market to dictate what the raise will be.

Westcoast now has mortgate rates of 11¼, 11½ and 11¾. These, he said, could either be raised by ¼ or ½ per cent.

Bouey noted that since the central bank last raised the prime rate on the Canadian dollar — to 10¾ from 10¼

Firms Plan Major Outlays

OTTAWA (CP) — Business leaders do not expect the economy to improve in the year ahead, but they are planning increased investment spending, the Conference Board in Canada said today.

In its quarterly survey of business attitudes of 220 senior executive, the board, a private economic research organization, says somewhat higher levels of investment can be expected in the near term.

The survey does not take into account Wednesday's half-a-percentage-point increase in the Bank of Canada's lending rate.

The central bank's decision this week to raise its lending rate to the chartered banks to a record-high 11.25 per cent is likely to increase borrowing costs for business. It could dampen enthusiasm for new spending on plants, machinery and equipment.

"The outlook for business investment has improved substantially compared to six months ago," said the board in a news release.

"The depreciation of the Canadian dollar and strong foreign sales have improved capacity utilization (the proportion of available equipment and manpower in active service) and profit levels to the point that senior business executives now are planning higher levels of investment spending in the near term."

The board said its latest survey showed the highest level of confidence since it began sending out questionnaires two years ago. The present was a good time to invest.

After two years of weak investment spending, the board found a turning point was reached in mid-1978. It is forecasting a new willingness among business to expand in the months ahead.

The businessmen foresee little change, or possibly a worsening in the economy as a whole during the next six months. Compared with the board's previous survey, three months ago, the proportion expecting the economy to worsen in the short-

An Out-of-Town 'Rest' for Shah

Times News Services

After weeks of virtual seclusion in his palace, the embattled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi left Tehran with his family today for two days of rest at a resort 64 kilometres east of here.

There was growing speculation when — or if — the shah would leave the country. The monarch has said he would like to take a vacation "when the situation permits."

Some observers have speculated the holiday could turn into an extended one that could spell the end of the shah's 38-year reign.

Government sources said the shah would rest "for a few days" at a resort near Tehran but there were no plans for him to leave the country.

Ardeshir Zahedi, a key government aide, reported the shah had issued a royal decree appointing Shahpour Bakhtiar prime minister. The shah asked Bakhtiar last weekend to form a new civilian government to try to quell Iran's political violence.

Reuters news agency today quoted military sources as saying the commander of the Iranian army has resigned and left the country with the approval of the shah.

The sources said Gen. Gholamli Oveissi, who was also the martial law governor of Tehran, was granted permission to resign earlier this week by the shah, who is commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

Oveissi was widely regarded as a political hardliner opposed to the formation of a new government by Bakhtiar.

Zahedi, Iran's ambassador to Washington, said the royal family is expected to return to Tehran on Saturday, when Bakhtiar will probably present his cabinet to the monarch and the government will be formally installed, replacing a two-month-old military administration.

Meanwhile, 182 more Canadians and other nationals were brought from Iran by Canadian Hercules planes to Ankara today and officials estimated the evacuation may be completed Friday.

Initially, Canadian officials expected to complete the rescue program today but encountered some slowdown and finally concluded the remaining 70 awaiting transport at Tehran cannot be brought out until Friday.

In two days the Canadian planes carried 374 Canadians and other nationals out of Tehran.

GENE ISOLATED THAT CAUSES DEPRESSION?

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A California geneticist claims to have identified the gene in humans that could be a cause of mental depression, chronic alcoholism and even multiple sclerosis.

Writing in the upcoming issue of the prestigious British journal Nature, Dr. David Comings of the City of Hope Medical Centre in Duarte, Calif., said he has isolated and identified in people who died of suicide and alcoholism an abnormal gene that was more than twice as prevalent in their brain cells as it was in the brains of people who died of stroke, heart disease, cancer or accidents.

"Schizophrenia and depression are psychoses that each afflict 1 per cent of the population," Comings said Wednesday night in a telephone interview from his home in Duarte, about 30 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

"We claim to have found what appears to be the first biochemical evidence of one of those psychoses,

While the finding of that evidence is a basic medical observation, it is nowhere near a cure for depression or any of the other two diseases linked with the gene. But, at the very least, it is a first major step toward improving the understanding and treatment of depression the leading cause of suicide.

Comings calls the newly discovered gene Pc 1 Duarte, saying it is a mutant gene genetically different fom any other gene found in the brain.

He said he found the gene in the grey and white matter of the brain, in men and in women and in whites and blacks.

The California researcher identified the gene as a cystosol protein, which he found only in the brain. He said this makes it impossible to test for in infants before they are born.

Some other genetic defects can be found before birth by tapping the amniotic fluid in a mother's womb.

"We have only identified this gene in the brains of dead people," Comings said. "We don't know yet if we can devise a test to identify the gene in people still living. One would have to devise such a test to treat peo-

GUADELOUPE GATHERING BY BIG FOUR

SAINT-FRANCOIS, Guadeloupe (AP) — President Carter and the government chiefs of Britain, France and West Germany begin an informal two-day summit meeting haunted by the spectre of anarchy in Iran.

Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, told reporters in Washington Wednesday that the president in his talks today with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain would reiterate his support for Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Brzezinski said the three European leaders agree with Carter's backing for the threatened shah, one of the biggest customers for their arms and other manufactures and a major source of oil for Western industry.

Postal Trio Fired

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office was accused today of trying to break up the militant inside workers' union by firing three union stewards here.

The three stewards of the Ottawa local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers were fired Wednesday and told to leave the Alta Vista post office. Two of them refused to leave and stayed to finish their shifts.

The three who were fired—Pat Berry, Danielle Desormeaux and Guy Barrette—are filing grievances, said Louis Lang, president of the Ottawa local.

They were fired in connection with the union's mass defiance last October of a parliamentary back-to-work order. There has been a handful of firings and hundreds of job suspensions across the country following the strike.

Pedersen and Scott with their bomb-battling brainchild

Wall-Walker Robot Cools Bomb Fears

TORONTO (CP) — Can a $12,000 robot named RM1-1 or RM1-2 take some of the human risk out of responding to a bomb threat?

The RCMP and the Ontario Provincial Police apparently think so. The RCMP has bought seven of the robots and the OPP is buying two.

The robot—designed to open doors, climb vertical walls, travel any terrain and pull a three-quarter-ton truck—is the brainchild of Borg Pedersen and George Scott and is being marketed by Pedsco (Canada) Ltd. of Toronto.

The six-wheeled robot can be controlled by a cable of up to about 90 metres or directed by remote-control radio as far away as a mile.

It is equipped with a closed-circuit television camera that can be moved close to the suspected bomb. Its long mechanical arm has a claw-like hand that can softly pick up a package.

"If the package is a bomb, the robot can be equipped with devices to disrupt the bomb," a provincial police bomb disposal expert said.

"It does take some of the personal risk away."

However, a man still has to go in and pick up the pieces and there is always a danger, of finding a bomb within a bomb, said the OPP officer, who asked not to be identified because bomb disposal experts are often the target of terrorists.

Between January and September of last year, Canadian police bomb-disposal officers investigated bombings, attempted bombings or recovered explosives at least once a day.

There were 115 incidents in British Columbia, 59 in Alberta, 17 in Saskatchewan, 20 in Manitoba, 136 in Ontario, 26 in Quebec, 18 in New Brunswick, 17 in Nova Scotia, three in Newfoundland, six in the Yukon and four in the North West Territories. There were none in Prince Edward Island.

The robot, called a remote mobile investigation unit, also can be armed with a shotgun that can be fired remotely to "tear away the covering and see what's inside," the expert said.

But the Pederson-Scott team has developed a small portable x-ray unit, costing $4,500, that can take pictures through a half an inch of steel when mounted on the robot.

"Once the robot is in position we can move in, take the x-rays and within a minute see a print of what we're facing," the expert said.

He also said the robot can be used for more than sniffing out bombs.

"It could drag out a person who has been shot and is still under fire. Or it could scan an area where a suspect is holed up. Instead of sending in policemen, we could simply deploy the robot."

Sidney Man Second Big B.C. Winner

A Sidney man has won a million dollars on the Provincial Lottery.

Lottery officials are withholding his name pending verification of the ticket.

The man, who held the lucky ticket on the New Year's Eve draw, is at present visiting Europe but is expected home later in the week.

Don Phillips, a spokesman for the B.C. Lotteries Commission, said the man is the second big winner in B.C. on the draw.

Charles Balsor of Vancouver has already been confirmed the winner of one of the five million dollar prizes. (See picture on page 2).

Meanwhile Lady Luck visited another Victoria household Wednesday night with the O'Flynn family walking off with $100,000 win on the Western Canada lottery.

The winning ticket — 49769 in Series 04 — was one of five in a booklet bought jointly by Peggie and Harry O'Flynn of 881 McAdam Place and O'Flynn's father, Peter O'Flynn, 83, of 915 Selkirk.

"I didn't believe at first . . . and I still don't," Mrs. O'Flynn said in an interview this morning.

It's not, however, the first time the family has won on the Western. Last week they picked up $25 for getting the last three numbers right. They've been lucky like that on three or four previous draws.

And Mrs. O'Flynn said she once won $450 on a local radio contest about 15 years ago.

The two families will split the $100,000 windfall between them.

Mrs. O'Flynn said she wasn't sure what she and her husband, a retired marine engineer, will do with the money.

Their needs are few, she said. They already own a new house and new car.

"We have no plans. The only place I'd like to go is Tahiti."

The elder O'Flynn is also uncertain what he and his wife will do with their winnings.

"He told us he only wished this had happened to him 30 years ago," Mrs. O'Flynn said.

term almost doubled to 18.5 per cent. Sixty-two per cent of those surveyed foresee little change.

Nevertheless, improved sales and profits in recent months appear to have convinced business leaders the outlook for them remains positive.

The strongest sector of the economy was the export market. More than 60 per cent expected to increase sales abroad in the next six months. They attributed a major part of this export potential to the low value of the Canadian dollar on world money markets. This allows Canada to sell at bargain prices abroad.

On a less optimistic note, more businesssmen than in the previous survey expect unemployment to worsen in the next half year. There now are 850,000 officially out of work.

More than half surveyed look for little change in the rate of inflation, which now is 8.8 per cent annually. The remainder were split—26 per cent expecting inflation to worsen and 23 anticipating some improvement.

The board found an increase in business leaders expecting the economy to suffer from labor disputes and rapid wage increases.

BOOZER'S BAFFLER might be the name for this gizmo displayed by Don H. Heaton of Pittsburgh. The box that Heaton is holding would be placed in the car of a known drunk driver and he would have to push the button (centre) when the lights flash to make the car run. The box on the table is a clock that is used to measure the reaction time of a potential user.

The Shah Leaves Tehran

A military flight left Ankara today carrying 67 Canadians and is due to land in Ottawa this evening.

A British Navy ship took about 60 on board, including some Canadians, and sailed from the southern Iranian port of Bandar Abbas where the evacuees had been working on a military base.

In Washington, a state department spokesman said the shah would be welcome in the United States if he decides to leave the country.

But Hodding Carter emphasized that the Carter administration is not advising the embattled shah to leave his throne.

Police in Beverly Hills, Calif., meanwhile, prepared for further violent demonstrations following Tuesday's outbreak at the hillside mansion of the shah's sister.

The 90-year-old mother of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, Tadj Ul Moluk, was moved from the mansion to several hotels in the Los Angeles area for protection after the protest group battled police, destroyed at least to cars and set several fires.

Although not an Arab nation, Iran is predominantly Moslem like most of the Arab world, and Ayatullah Khomaini, the exiled religious leader of the fight against the shah, has called for an end to oil shipments to Israel.

Labor Gearing Up For Attack on Bill

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria Labor Council delegates Wednesday night called on both public and private sector employees to conduct a high-profile fight against legislation which would expand the definition of essential services.

Council also condemned the provincial government for what it called "its arbitrary action aimed at curtailing the bargaining process for public sector unions."

Labor's wrath is directed at Bill 46, which put an end to the West Kootenay school district strike/lockout in December. The act contains a section which, although not yet proclaimed, would include municipal, regional and educational employees under the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Victoria union leaders voiced their concern about the legislation as organized labor in B.C. prepares its assault on the government action.

The B.C. Federation of Labor has mounted a campaign which will include a $100,000 advertising program and a number of protest rallies.

The federation's special public sector union committee will hold its first meeting in Vancouver Friday morning to plan the attack.

Later that day, federation staff members will also meet to discuss the committee's plans.

Saturday, representatives from B.C. locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will hold a special conference in Vancouver to discuss Bill 46 and all its ramifications.

Muriel Overgaard, president of CUPE's B.C. division, said the purpose of the conference is to educate the members on what the government move means.

The union is expected to support the federation's planned assault and come up with some strategy of its own.

Those attending the conference will also discuss a plan by the union to file a complaint with the Labor Relations Board that the West Kootenay school trustees failed to bargain in good faith.

The trustees and CUPE employees in Nelson, Trail, Castlegar and Grand Forks were involved in a lengthy strike/lockout situation until the government brought in back-to-work legislation at a special session of the legislature Dec. 8.

Neil Hindle of the boilermakers union described the legislation as insidious.

He said it was brought in by a government which seems bent on "shackling organized labor."

On the same theme, Roger Lewis, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said if janitors in the West Kootenays can be looked upon as essential than it won't be long before IWA members find themselves in the same position.

Council president John Shields said the government axe is taking little chips at the labor movement.

"When they start swinging that axe at the trunk of the trade union movement it is all of us who are going to be affected."

Lending Rate Up Effective Friday

Nov. 6 — interest rates in the United States have risen sharply.

He said "the substantial decline in the external value of the Canadian dollar that has occurred is working to reduce Canada's large deficit in international trade in goods and services, but the re-channelling of trade flows will take considerable time."

"In the meantime," he said in his news release, "the deficit must continue to be financed by net inflows of capital, and unless interest rates in Canada are high enough relative to U.S. rates to attract capital inflows and to discourage capital outflows the needed financing will not be available in a satisfactory way."

The increase was forecast earlier in the day with the release of federal figures showing the government borrowed $300 million from a line of credit established in 1977 and spent another $259.5 million of its own to shore up the dollar during December.

That brought to almost $5 billion the amount borrowed by the government in 1978 to bolster the dollar.

At the same time, the prime lending rate charged by U.S. chartered banks to their best customers rose steadily throughout 1978 to more than 12 per cent — a record high.

Bouey continued in his news release to support the idea that the Canadian dollar should float freely on international markets, despite the suggestions of some economists that fixing the international rate of the dollar would establish a balance that has been lacking in the last year.

Donald Selman, president of the Vancouver Board of Trade, said Wednesday the Bank of Canada's move was a necessary one.

Selman said that until the United States gets itself on a better economic keel, Canada is going to have to keep increasing interest rates.

It is not a question of the tightness of money but a matter of ensuring Canadian interest rates are high enough to prevent an outfall of foreign dollars currently in the country, he said.

Selman said the move will have an immediate effect on the consumer using credit because he will have to pay higher rates. Businesses will also suffer in the long term because they too will be paying high rates for necessary credit.

Depression Gene Isolated?

ple for depression born of this gene."

Comings said he identified the abnormal gene after a fruitless search for the gene responsible for a rare neurologic disease known as Huntington disease, a degenerative ailment of the central nervous system. Huntington disease is always fatal. It is perhaps best known as the disease that claimed the life of folk singer Woody Guthrie.

Separating genes from the brains of dead victims of Huntington disease, Comings said he found no signs of an abnormal gene that behaved like it might be a case of the rare brain disorder.

But in looking at the brains of stroke and heart attack victims to be matched against those dead of Huntington disease, Comings discovered the mutant gene he called Pe 1 Duarte in about 30 per cent of the victims of stroke and heart attack and more than 50 per cent of the victims of multiple sclerosis.

"We looked for this gene in schizophrenics and couldn't find it," Comings said. "Then a doctor in St. Louis donated to us 28 brains of people who had a medical record of depression and who had committed suicide. We found the gene in 65 per cent of the brains."

Just as important, Comings found a double dose of the abnormal gene in 20 per cent of the St. Louis suicides, meaning they had received the gene from both their mothers and fathers. Only 2½ per cent of the stroke and heart attack victims showed evidence of a double dose of the brain gene.

"This told us that if you had the mutant gene," Comings said, "your risk of being depressive runs much greater than if you don't have it."

Comings conceded his finding is not conclusive evidence that the gene causes mental depression but said it is almost surely involved. "Either this gene is the only gene involved," he said, "or it is one of the genes involved."

Later work with the brains of dead alcoholics showed almost the same frequency of the abnormal gene as it existed in depressives — which Comings said strongly suggests that the gene is a cause of chronic alcoholism.

Still to be identified is the environental "trigger" that acts together with the gene to produce depression.

60-BELOW BACK IN THE SHACK

Gil Smith with a relic that was used for measuring barometric pressure

By AB KENT
Times Staff

BACK IN THE DAWN of his career Gil Smith weathered 60-below winters in a remote northern outpost of the Canadian metezological service.

Today at 57, after more than 34 years as a met technician, he can look back and say he enjoyed the life he shared in a Beatton River shack where three inches of ice would coat the inner walls while he and his wife slept.

But is it any wonder he likes Victoria, where he has spent 22 years at Gonzales Observatory, the last 10 as officer in charge of the climate data centre?

"There's something about Victoria . . . I enjoy life here. I certainly like the climate," Smith said.

His retirement is the second this month from the white-domed structure dominating the Gonzales district, following senior met technician Jack Bell, who spent his entire 28 years of service in the Victoria weather ffice.

Smith has seen the development of Gonzales from a 24-hour manned weather reporting station into the statistical and supply centre for the Pacific region of Canada's Atmospheric Environment Service.

It remains a small link in the national weather reporting network, but it is no longer manned around the clock and automated equipment allows weather information to be transmitted remotely during the night.

As a data centre, Gonzales supplies "a tremendous quantity of weather information," mostly to other government agencies in Canada and the U.S., but also to industry, agriculture and consulting firms.

Equipment and techniques of the past are preserved in a permanent display set up by Smith for the 10,000-14,000 visitors who climb the hill to the observatory each year.

In leaving, he hopes the building itself will be designated and remain a heritage structure, even though its future role in AES may be uncertain.

Smith worked with three well-known forecasters in Victoria — William Mackie and Allan McQuarrie in the 50s and 60s, both of whom are retired — and lately Norman Dressler. He first worked with McQuarrie two years in Calgary in the early 50s before he was transferred to Victoria.

Smith joined the met service at Edmonton airport, fresh out of the artillery where he served more than five years and survived the abortive Dieppe raid, the invasion of Europe and a stint in the Italian campaign.

He was posted to Yellowknife as an observer technician, the only weatherman among a group of radio range technicians concerned with keeping aircraft on course in the trackless bush and tundra, and in all spent about five years in northern postings.

HE ALWAYS HAD a fancy for Victoria, where he had come on holiday as a boy from Lethbridge, and where he spent a few months with an anti-aircraft battery early in the war. Smith raised his two daughters here and plans to stay.

He is president of the 16th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery Association, a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, curls, gardens, goes fishing, collects stamps, makes wine and as of last year has become a golfer.

"I've enjoyed my career with the department and it's been rewarding in many ways," he said.

"I have seen a good part of the country, and in all the places I've been, I've never met anyone in the civil service that I've disliked. I've had lots of disagreements with people. But they are very dedicated and above average intelligence."

He said the service has changed, with seniority counting less than ability for advancement: "It's like any other job today. If you don't cut the mustard, you're out."

Municipal Layoffs Feared In Wake of Budget Curbs

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said today the government's action in restricting municipal budgets might mean staff layoffs.

He hoped, however, the move won't adversely affect current negotiations with the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Smith, head of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, said with the province ordering regional and municipal budgets held to five per cent increases some staff reductions might be necessary — but he hoped not.

"Lay-offs and cuts of service are something we don't want and I don't think our taxpayers want to any large degree either."

He added that a lot will depend on CUPE's wage demands.

"I'm hopeful of a settlement . . . they realize it's not a particularly fat time for municipalities."

CUPE officials could not be contacted for reaction to Smith's remarks, but a CUPE delegate told Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night the government's action to control municipal spending was a direct blow at labor. (See page 8.)

William Doherty said the move was in line with federal and provincial policy to prevent public sector employees from "even keeping up with rising inflation."

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe announced Wednesday a freeze on the municipal general purpose mill rate at the 1978 level.

Wolfe said that increases in municipal and regional and hospital district budgets will be limited to five per cent, and that municipalities will be required to use their unspent 1977 and 1978 reserves as revenue during 1979.

Former NDP finance minister Dave Stupich said the government's move will have a depressing effect on the economy.

"It is intended to be smart politics rather than good economics," Stupich said.

"At this time when so much labor is unemployed, municipalities should be encouraged to embark on public works projects rather than wait until the economy improves when they will be competing for scarce labor and scarce materials," the Nanaimo MLA said.

"The economy needs that kind of a shot in the arm rather than the depressing effect of this kind of a policy."

The former finance minister said the five-per-cent ceiling on budget increases "in view of a nine to 10-per-cent inflation rate is in effect a cutback."

"For the provincial government to impose that kind of a cutback when it influences as much of the economy as it does, is bound to have a depressing effect."

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the government's action is an interim measure.

"I'm hoping that over the next year we can develop a more rational approach to the whole question."

He said he is sure the policy will be viewed by some municipalities as an infringement.

"I guess in part we can't avoid appearing that way, Vander Zalm.

"It's not directed at those municipalities which are budgeting in a manner which will accomplish the five per cent or less in any case.

"We're looking at those which would be considerably above that and those that have managed to put away some considerable surpluses."

He said the policy is a good guideline for all municipalities to follow.

"If they are already doing it, they have no concern; if they're not, then they should be looking at their books because we will be."

George Ferguson, president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, said most municipalities agree with the idea of fiscal restraint, but object to Wolfe's methods.

"There was no consultation with any level of government over this," he said. "They (the provincial government) are saying school boards and municipalities are not capable of running our own financial affairs."

Municipalities would prefer a system of voluntary restraint with the five-per-cent figure being used as a guideline, he said.

Child Act Draws Fire

The Victoria Civil Liberties Association is unhappy with the provincial government's proposed new Family and Child Services Act.

In a two-page critique sent to Vic Belknap of the Children's Legislation Committee, the association said the legislation fails to provide children with the right to independent legal representation and neglects to establish a guaranteed level of care for children.

Association members also expressed concern over the lack of adequate definitions of terms such as "abandoned, neglected, abused, and deprived," in the act, and said they fear the legislation would be operated by regulation rather than statute.

In addition, the association said it is concerned about the consequences of a central registry recommended by the act.

The registry would list the names of persons who have allegedly abused or neglected their children.

The association wants some guarantee names would be removed if circumstances changed.

Association president Frank Preston said in an interview the committee has misgivings about the general philosophy of the legislation and the possible effect it will have on low income families.

He said the act would be no improvement over the 78-year-old Protection of Children Act it is meant to replace.

"Indeed there are some among us who feel that in view of present day needs it would be worse," he said.

Preston said the government has failed to look at the total picture of family and children's law.

"The government said this act would be the cornerstone of more family legislation," he said. "If that's the case, they should carpet the whole thing, and start again."

Q. How many universities has Britain? J.L.

The Open University is a non-residential university which provides part-time degree and other courses, using a combination of television and radio broadcasts, correspondence courses. Standard of degrees are the same as those of other universities.

Sun Eclipse Feb. 26

The only total eclipse of the sun in North America for the next 45 years will be visible Feb. 26 from Victoria and other southern B.C. points.

In Victoria about 98 per cent of the sun's surface will be obscured by the moon at the peak of the phenomenon, making the sky as dark as it would be just after sunset.

People should not look at the sun without some eye protection. Permanent damage could result.

Astronomer Ernie Pfannenschmidt said the total obscurity would be 2½ minutes although the partial eclipse will last about two hours, reaching its peak at 8:13 a.m. in Victoria.

The path of the total eclipse — about 150 miles wide — will cross the Pacific and touch the continent at Portland, Ore., about 7:11 a.m.

It will continue in a northeasterly direction across Southern Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Northern Ontario, Hudson Bay, the Arctic and Greenland.

The National Research Council will record solar corona and upper atmospheric changes before and during the eclipse, launching 34 instrument-carrying rockets.

Action Starts On Late Taxes

More than $1 million in city taxes was still owing at the end of December, Ald. Murray Glazier said today.

(See also page 33.)

Glazier, chairman of council's finance committee, said city hall has started action to recover the taxes and expects to have most of the money within four or five months.

Writs will be issued immediately to all those who owe the city more than $3,000 and if that doesn't succeed steps will be taken to seize properties.

The chasing of overdue taxes is an annual game and city hall seldom has to go as far as selling properties to get its money.

In December, 1976, there was $589,500 in tax arrears and by March all but $38,000 had been collected. In December, 1977, there was $700,000 outstanding and by August everything had been paid.

The overdue $1.1 million represents 3.8 per cent of total taxes receivable by the city.

Glazier said the city has to set aside funds in its budget to cover the overdue amount, which is unfair to the taxpayers who have to take up the slack.

CORPORATE IMAGE of the Commerce Bank looks rather crooked here. But it's no reflection on the institution's business ethics, just a distorted reflection of the bank's downtown headquarters in the windows of the new Rohani Building on Fort. A radical departure from the cosy, intimate scale of Fort's architecture, design of the Rohani caused controversy in early stages.

Are You Ready for Metric Gas?

Figuring out the price of a tank of gas will soon be simpler for Victoria motorists who keep pocket calculators in their glove compartments.

Spokesmen for major oil companies said Wednesday they are almost ready to convert pumps to the metric system.

A Gulf Canada Ltd. spokesman predicted the switch from gallons to litres could take place

At Gulf the changeover will take place simultaneously at all company-owned stations.

Shell Canada Ltd. said it will ease into the metric system, gradually converting pumps over three months.

Imperial Oil controls only a handful of the stations it supplies and said decisions when to convert will be made by individual operators.

Service stations have until the end of 1980 to complete the metric conversion.

Since most pumps contain converter kits, the actual changeover is as simple as turning a key or pressing a button.

Right now the biggest headache is changing the price signs on the gas pumps.

Some of the older pumps at independent stations can't be converted and owners will have to install new ones.

The oil companies have switched their service station delivery systems to metric and are canning oil in litres.

They are waiting for existing stocks of oil to run out before putting new litre containers on the shelves.

Domestic furnace oil deliveries will change to metric in September.

The pumps will be checked by government inspectors to verify their accuracy.

Companies have been urged not to use the conversion to make new price increases.

Price-conscious motorists can make their own comparisions by using a slide-rule type of calculator (available from the metric commission) to figure out the metric or Imperial equivalent for any gasoline price.

The standard conversion figure is 4.5 litres to the gallon.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market continued its sharp advance in active mid-afternoon trading today, spurred by sharply higher energy issues.

The TSE 300 index was up 6.55 to 1,337.78 in line with a 11.78 rise to 829.17 in the Dow Jones industrial index at New York.

Among the four most heavily-weighted groups within the 14-unit TSE composite index, oil and gas stocks climbed 21.61 to 1,902.55, metals and minerals 12.95 to 1,148.83 and financial services 3.54 to 1,196.59. Industrial products eased 2.66 to 1,063.41.

Management companies, up 28 points, led the six gainers among the other 10 groups. Utilities were the biggest of the four losers.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 3.72 million shares, up from 3.2 million at the same time Wednesday.

Advances led declines 247 to 154 with 192 issues unchanged.

A trading halt issued at Wednesday's opening continued in shares of Siebens Oil and Gas Ltd. pending contact with the company. The stock last traded at $38⅜ a share.

Among industrials, Dome Petroleum gained 1 to $97, Dylex Ltd. A ⅞ to $14⅛, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ⅞ to $55⅞, Baton Broadcasting ⅞ to $14⅞ and Gulf Canada ⅞ to $37⅞.

Dominion Bridge dropped 1¾ to $31½ on the sale of 1,900 shares, Imasco Ltd. ¾ to $40, Noranda Mines A ½ to $38¾, Hudson's Bay Co. ½ to $20¼ and Traders Group A ¼ to $16.

McIntyre Mines rose ¾ to $25¾, Kerr Addison A ½ to $12½ and Preston Mines ⅜ to $18⅞. Kam-Kotia Mines declined 30 cents to $4.60 and Wright-Hargreaves Mines 10 cents to 95 cents.

Chieftain Development advanced ¾ to $29, CanDel Oil ¾ to $27¾ and Ranger Oil Canada ⅜ to $17⅝. Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum fell ⅜ to $36¾ and Czar Resources ¼ to $7½.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed broadly higher for the third straight day today as investor hopess were bolstered by a lull in the civil strife in Iran.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was ahead by 11.35 points at 828.74 at 2 p.m., following a 5.97-point gain Wednesday.

Advances outnumbered declines by better than 1-to-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, and volume came to a busy 22.28 million shares in the first four hours of trading.

Among actively-traded issues, Sears Roebuck rose ¼ to $20⅜ despite its report that December sales slipped 2.2 per cent from 1977 levels. Deere Co. gained 1⅝ to $38 and National Can advanced ½ to $19⅞. Oils were higher, with Exxon up ⅝ to $50⅛. Xerox rose 1⅜ to $56¼, IBM rose 1¾ to $308¼, and Eastman Kodak was ahead by ⅜ to $62½.

In Iran, as the pace of demonstrations continued to slow, it was announced that the shah had appointed Shapour Bakhtiar prime minister. Bakhtiar had been asked last weekend to form a new government. The appointment gave some hope that the country's strike-halted oil production might resume soon.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index gained 0.65 to 55.22.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) Prices continued to post broad gains today in moderate trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Brascan A was again the most active issue at the exchange, gaining 1⅜ at $19⅞ on a volume of 13,957 shares traded. Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas picked up 2 at $56¼, Shell Canada ⅜ at $17, MacMillan Bloedel ⅜ at $24¾ and Northern Telecom ⅛ at $37. Hudson's Bay Company was off ¼ at $20½. Among speculative issues, Basic Resources A fell 10 cents to $4.75 on a volume of 6200 shares traded.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices were narrowly higher near the close of light trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 3.3 to 483.2 an hour before the close. Profit-taking sent leading equities down from earlier gains as demand subsided. Gold shares firmed with the bullion price. Canadian issues moved up in line with home markets.

New Structure For Gold Trading

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Commodity Exchange has restructured its gold futures market in a move to improve trade opportunities in 100-ounce contracts.

The exchange has introduced five new 100-ounce gold futures contracts calling for delivery during the months of March, June, September and December, 1979 and March, 1980.

Trading facilities were withdrawn for contracts calling for delivery in November, 1979 and February 1980.

Facilities for February, May and August, 1979 contracts will continue to be provided as long as there are outstanding contracts calling for delivery in those months.

During the first day of trade under the new system the number of 100-ounce contracts traded increased to 38 from last Friday's total of two.

Exchange president Doug Ford says the change will allow commercial traders and the public to make the greatest use of gold futures options.

Because the new months coincide with delivery months traded elsewhere, traders will find it easier to take advantage of any differences in price between markets.

Also, Ford said, the new trading months will give proposed gold futures options a closer time relationship with existing Swiss cash gold options.

DESIGN CONTEST

OTTAWA (CP) — A national housing design competition has been organized to try to find a better home design for medium density areas in the next decade, the urban affairs department has announced.

A department statement said the contest, sponsored by the federal Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Canadian Design Council, has 25 prizes totalling $135,000 to be distributed equally among winning architects registered in five regions of the country.

60-BELOW BACK IN THE SHACK

Three Inches of Ice . . . on Inside

By AB KENT
Times Staff

BACK IN THE DAWN of his career Gil Smith weathered 60-below winters in a remote northern outpost of the Canadian meterological service.

Today at 57, after more than 34 years as a met technician, he can look back and say he enjoyed the life he shared in a Beatton River shack where three inches of ice would coat the inner walls while he and his wife slept.

But is it any wonder he likes Victoria, where he has spent 22 years at Gonzales Observatory, the last 10 as officer in charge of the climate data centre?

"There's something about Victoria . . . I enjoy life here. I certainly like the climate," Smith said.

His retirement is the second this month from the white-domed structure dominating the Gonzales district, following senior met technician Jack Bell, who spent his entire 28 years of service in the Victoria weather ffice.

Smith has seen the development of Gonzales from a 24-hour manned weather reporting station into the statistical and supply centre for the Pacific region of Canada's Atmospheric Environment Service.

It remains a small link in the national weather reporting network, but it is no longer manned around the clock and automated equipment allows weather information to be transmitted remotely during the night.

As a data centre, Gonzales supplies "a tremendous quantity of weather information," mostly to other government agencies in Canada and the U.S., but also to industry, agriculture and consulting firms.

Equipment and techniques of the past are preserved in a permanent display set up by Smith for the 10,000-11,000 visitors who climb the hill to the observatory each year.

In leaving, he hopes the building itself will be designated and remain a heritage structure, even though its future role in AES may be uncertain.

Smith worked with three well-known forecasters in Victoria — William Mackie and Allan McQuarrie in the 50s and 60s, both of whom are retired — and lately Norman Dressler. He first worked with McQuarrie two years in Calgary in the early 50s before he was transferred to Victoria.

Smith joined the met service at Edmonton airport, fresh out of the artillery where he served more than five years and survived the abortive Dieppe raid, the invasion of Europe and a stint in the Italian campaign.

He was posted to Yellowknife as an observer technician, the only weatherman among a group of radio range technicians concerned with keeping aircraft on course in the trackless bush and tundra, and in all spent about five years in northern postings.

HE ALWAYS HAD a fancy for Victoria, where he had come on holiday as a boy from Lethbridge, and where he spent a few months with an anti-aircraft battery early in the war. Smith raised his two daughters here and plans to stay.

He is president of the 16th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery Association, a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, curls, gardens, goes fishing, collects stamps, makes wine and as of last year has become a golfer.

"I've enjoyed my career with the department and it's been rewarding in many ways," he said.

"I have seen a good part of the country, and in all the places I've been, I've never met anyone in the civil service that I've disliked. I've had lots of disagreements with people. But they are very dedicated and above average intelligence."

He said the service has changed, with seniority counting less than ability for advancement: "It's like any other job today. If you don't cut the mustard, you're out."

Municipal Layoffs Feared In Wake of Budget Curbs

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said today the government's action in restricting municipal budgets might mean staff layoffs.

He hoped, however, the move won't adversely affect current negotiations with the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE).

Smith, head of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, said with the province ordering regional and municipal budgets held to five per cent increases, some staff reductions might be necessary — but he hoped not.

"Lay-offs and cuts of service are something we don't want and I don't think our taxpayers want to any large degree either."

He added that a lot will depend on CUPE's wage demands.

"I'm hopeful of a settlement . . . they realize it's not a particularly fat time for municipalities."

CUPE officials could not be contacted for reaction to Smith's remarks, but a CUPE delegate told Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night the government's action to control municipal spending was a direct blow at labor. (See page 8.)

William Doherty said the move was in line with federal and provincial policy to prevent public sector employees from "even keeping up with rising inflation."

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe announced Wednesday a freeze on the municipal general purpose mill rate at the 1978 level.

Wolfe said that increases in municipal and regional and hospital district budgets will be limited to five per cent, and that municipalities will be required to use their unspent 1977 and 1978 reserves as revenue during 1979.

Former NDP finance minister Dave Stupich said the government's move will have a depressing effect on the economy.

"It is intended to be smart politics rather than good economics," Stupich said.

"At this time when so much labor is unemployed, municipalities should be encouraged to embark on public works projects rather than wait until the economy improves when they will be competing for scarce labor and scarce materials," the Nanaimo MLA said.

"The economy needs that kind of a shot in the arm rather than the depressing effect of this kind of a policy."

The former finance minister said the five-per-cent ceiling on budget increases "in view of a nine to 10-per-cent inflation rate is in effect a cutback."

"For the provincial government to impose that kind of a cutback when it influences as much of the economy as it does, is bound to have a depressing effect."

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the government's action is an interim measure.

"I'm hoping that over the next year we can develop a more rational approach to the whole question."

He said he is sure the policy will be viewed by some municipalities as an infringement.

"I guess in part we can't avoid appearing that way," Vander Zalm.

"It's not directed at those municipalities which are budgeting in a manner which will accomplish the five per cent or less in any case.

"We're looking at those which would be considerably above that and those that have managed to put away some considerable surpluses."

He said the policy is a good guideline for all municipalities to follow.

"If they are already doing it, they have no concern; if they're not, then they should be looking at their books because we will be."

George Ferguson, president of the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, said most municipalities agree with the idea of fiscal restraint, but object to Wolfe's methods.

"There was no consultation with any level of government over this," he said. "They (the provincial government) are saying school boards and municipalities are not capable of running our own financial affairs."

Municipalities would prefer a system of voluntary restraint with the five-per-cent figure being used as a guideline, he said.

Child Act Draws Fire

The Victoria Civil Liberties Association is unhappy with the provincial government's proposed new Family and Child Services Act.

In a two-page critique sent to Vic Belknap of the Children's Legislation Committee, the association said the legislation fails to provide children with the right to independent legal representation and neglects to establish a guaranteed level of care for children.

Association members also expressed concern over the lack of adequate definitions of terms such as "abandoned, neglected, abused, and deprived," in the act, and said they fear the legislation would be operated by regulation rather than statute.

In addition, the association said it is concerned about the consequences of a central registry recommended by the act.

The registry would list the names of persons who have allegedly abused or neglected their children.

The association wants some guarantee names would be removed if circumstances changed.

Association president Frank Preston said in an interview the committee has misgivings about the general philosophy of the legislation and the possible effect it will have on low income families.

He said the act would be no improvement over the 78-year-old Protection of Children Act it is meant to replace.

"Indeed there are some among us who feel that in view of present day needs it would be worse," he said.

Preston said the government has failed to look at the total picture of family and children's law.

"The government said this act would be the cornerstone of more family legislation," he said. "If that's the case, they should carpet the whole thing, and start again."

ASK THE TIMES

Q. How many universities has Britain? J.L.

A. There are 45 universities in Britain, including the Open University. The Open University is a non-residential university which provides part-time degree and other courses, using a combination of television and radio broadcasts, correspondence courses. Standard of degrees are the same as those of other universities.

Sun Eclipse Feb. 26

The only total eclipse of the sun in North America for the next 45 years will be visible Feb. 26 from Victoria and other southern B.C. points.

In Victoria about 98 per cent of the sun's surface will be obscured by the moon at the peak of the phenomenon, making the sky as dark as it would be just after sunset.

People should not look at the sun without some eye protection. Permanent damage could result.

Astronomer Ernie Pfannenschmidt said the total obscurity would be 2½ minutes although the partial eclipse will last about two hours, reaching its peak at 8:13 a.m. in Victoria.

The path of the total eclipse — about 150 miles wide — will cross the Pacific and touch the continent at Portland, Ore., about 7:11 a.m.

It will continue in a northeasterly direction across Southern Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Northern Ontario, Hudson Bay, the Arctic and Greenland.

The National Research Council will record solar corona and upper atmospheric changes before and during the eclipse, launching 31 instrument-carrying rockets.

Action Starts On Late Taxes

More than $1 million in city taxes was still owing at the end of December, Ald. Murray Glazier said today.

(See also page 33.)

Glazier, chairman of council's finance committee, said city hall has started action to recover the taxes and expects to have most of the money within four or five months.

Writs will be issued immediately to all those who owe the city more than $3,000 and if that doesn't succeed steps will be taken to seize properties.

The chasing of overdue taxes is an annual game and city hall seldom has to go as far as selling properties to get its money.

In December, 1976, there was $589,500 in tax arrears and by March all but $38,000 had been collected. In December, 1977, there was $700,000 outstanding and by August everything had been paid.

The overdue $1.1 million represents 3.8 per cent of total taxes receivable by the city.

Glazier said the city has to set aside funds in its budget to cover the overdue amount, which is unfair to the taxpayers who have to take up the slack.

CORPORATE IMAGE of the Commerce Bank looks rather crooked here. But it's no reflection on the institution's business ethics, just a distorted reflection of the bank's downtown headquarters in the windows of the new Rohani Building on Fort. A radical departure from the cosy, intimate scale of Fort's architecture, design of the Rohani caused controversy in early stages.

Are You Ready for Metric Gas?

Figuring out the price of a tank of gas will soon be simpler for Victoria motorists who keep pocket calculators in their glove compartments.

Spokesmen for major oil companies said Wednesday they are almost ready to convert pumps to the metric system.

A Gulf Canada Ltd. spokesman predicted the switch from gallons to litres could take place within the next few days or in a couple of weeks.

At Gulf the changeover will take place simultaneously at all company-owned stations.

Shell Canada Ltd. said it will ease into the metric system, gradually converting pumps over three months.

Imperial Oil controls only a handful of the stations it supplies and said decisions when to convert will be made by individual operators.

Service stations have until the end of 1980 to complete the metric conversion.

Since most pumps contain converter kits, the actual changeover is as simple as turning a key or pressing a button.

Right now the biggest headache is changing the price signs on the gas pumps.

Some of the older pumps at independent stations can't be converted and owners will have to install new ones.

The oil companies have switched their service station delivery systems to metric and are canning oil in litres.

They are waiting for existing stocks of oil to run out before putting new litre containers on the shelves.

Domestic furnace oil deliveries will change to metric in September.

The pumps will be checked by government inspectors to verify their accuracy.

Companies have been urged not to use the conversion to make new price increases.

Price-conscious motorists can make their own comparisions by using a slide-rule type of calculator (available from the metric commission) to figure out the metric or Imperial equivalent for any gasoline price.

The standard conversion figure is 4.5 litres to the gallon.
